

tory could the work of the historian yield greater fruit than in that of the past ten years; while, on the other hand, it is evident that during the next twenty years, the history of the Dominion will present lessons in political science of the greatest importance.

Mr. TUTTLE entered upon the work, not for a single year, but with the intention of devoting the remainder of his life to it, believing that in this way he might render his native country a service that would be appreciated by future generations. Five years have elapsed since his task was begun, and to-day (1878-9), he is more than ever resolved to continue his labors permanently from year to year, in the future:

The plan of the work, as originally laid out, comprises:—

Volume I.—Over six hundred double-column pages, quarto, richly embellished with fine art steel, wood and stone engravings, embracing scenery, battle scenes, portraits, &c., and embracing the general civil and political history of the several provinces of the Dominion, down to 1867. Published in 1877. Cloth, $8.75; Leather, $9.20; half Morocco, $10.00; full Turkey, full gilt, $14.00; or fourteen parts, 50 cents each. Sold only by canvassing Agents.

Volume II.—Over six hundred double-column pages, quarto, richly embellished with fine art steel, wood and stone engravings, embracing scenery, cities, public buildings portraits, etc., and embracing the general civil and political history of the Dominion, from 1867 to the close of Lord Dufferin's administration, in 1878. Published in 1878. Cloth, $8.75; Leather, $9.50; half Morocco, $10.00; full Turkey, gilt, $14.00; or fourteen parts, 50 cents each. Sold only by canvassing Agents.

Volume III.—Over six hundred double-column pages, quarto, richly embellished with original fine art steel, wood and stone engravings, mostly portraits, and embracing the biography of the several provinces of the Dominion, from the earliest settlement of the country to 1878. To be published in 1879, uniform in style and price with the other volumes. Sold only by canvassing Agents.

Volume IV.—Over six hundred double-column pages, quarto, richly embellished with fine art steel, wood and stone engravings, embracing scenery, portraits, buildings, etc., and comprising a county history of the Dominion of Canada; that is, giving the local history of each county within the Dominion. In this work the author will have the assistance of a competent editor, residing within each county. This volume will meet the long-felt want of preserving the local history of the country. To be published in 1879, uniform in style and price with the other volumes, and sold only by canvassing Agents.
