WANTED A CURE FOR CANCER.

A few centuries ago there were no doubt many diseases which were at that time considered, and rightly so, to be incurable. But since then and especially during the last decade the list of incurable diseases has gradually melted down under the penetrating rays of pathological research and scientific therapeutics. Of the few obdurate diseases which so far have resisted treatment or at least in which treatment has not been followed by cure, one of them, consumption bids fair before another quarter of a century to be as much a thing of the past as plague is now. For even if Koch's tuberculin treatment fails at least his investigations have forever settled the question of its contagiousness and from that point to the complete stamping of it out by isolation is only an easy step. But from the cure of cancer we seem to be just as far off as ever, in fact we are completely in the dark. But with a whole army of ardent investigators at work upon it we have good reason to hope that even it will eventually come under the category of curable diseases. Among the many claimants to the title of cancer cure is Count Mattei, an Italian nobleman, one of whose remedies
