

September 22, 1931.

Sir Norman Walker, Kt., M.D., LL.D.,
IX Queen Street,
Edinburgh, Scotland.

I have often thought of your kindness to me during the winter of 1928-29 when you gave me such good advice regarding my physical condition. You will be glad to know that I am feeling better than I have for the last three years. The sugar condition seems to have cleared up entirely, and as long as I am sensible and don't get a chill and don't become over-fatigued, I get along very well indeed. I went through my five months' visit to India, China and Japan without a single evidence of discomfort.

I hope that all goes well with you. Will you please remember me most kindly to Sir Harold Stiles, and in particular also to the Reverend Mr. Patterson, (who, I see, is to preach to you at the time of the celebration). I rejoice to know that he is well enough to undertake such a task.

Ever yours faithfully,
