

	PAGE
Two poets, (poets by report)	418
Two powder'd coxcombs wait at your command	343
U'win, I should but ill repay	328
Weak and irresolute is man	248
What features, form, mien, manners, with a mind	79
What is there in the vale of life	241
What nature, alas! has denied	293
What portents, from what distant region, ride	130
What thousands never knew the road	172
What various landscapes we meet	151
What virtue or what mental grace	329
When a bar of pure silver or ingot of gold	337
When all within is peace	354
When Aulus, the nocturnal thief, made prize	671
When darkness long has veil'd my mind	159
When Hagar found the bottle spent	467
When little more than boy in age	543
When long sequester'd from his throne	388
When the British warrior queen	310
When wit and genius meet their doom	306
Whence is it, that amaz'd I hear	111
Where hast thou floated, in what seas pursued	359
Where Humber pours his rich commercial stream	295
While thirteen moons saw smoothly run	365
Who does not blush when charged with selfish views?	631
Why weeps the muse for England? What appears	43
Wilds horrid and dark with overshadowing trees,	519
William was once a bashful youth	290
Winter has a joy for me	175
With no rich vands overcharg'd, I send	593
With seeds and lord lime, from the desert air	545
With two spurs or one; no great matter which	599
Would my Delia know if I love, let her take	270
"Write to Sardis, saith the Loue"	446
Ye Linnets, let us try, beneath this grove	183
Ye nymphs! if e'er your eyes were red	383
Ye nymphs of Himera (for ye have shed	612
Ye sister pow'rs, who o'er the sacred groves,	601
Ye sons of earth prepare the plough	113
You bid me write t' amuse the tedious hours	544
You gave your cheeks a rosy stain	571
You told me, I remember, glory, built	1