The main waiting rooms were filled to their capacity by a crowding, jostling mass of humanity, each intent on get-ting thru the doors first, and each one with a couple of grips containing belongings and lunch. These bags varied from the conventional leather suit case to the painted tin "box" carried on the shoulders of stalwart men from "over 'ome." Pasteboard shoe boxes tied up with string did not stand the strain very well, and the gaping holes enabled the inquisitive to get a glimpse of the lunch contain-ed inside.

At last all had passed the gateman, and they fancied their troubles were over, when lo and behold! the station platforms over on slips 5 and 6 were packed for their entire length, and the first train, one of 15 coaches,
