SEEING THE WAR WITH KING GEORGE

Royal Films Make Document of Historic and Human Interest.

ADD OTHER FEATURES

Popular Pictures Will Help Make Splendid Entertainment.

That the program at the Strand Theatre from Monday, Dec. 18 to Dec. 23 inclusive, will be one of the most interesting ones ever presented there was assured yesterday when announcement was made that in addition to "The King Visits His Armies in the Great Advance," a two-reel Charlie Chaplin farce will be shown. It is doubtful if a more interesting program combined in less than 5000 feet of film could be presented to a Toronto audience. The headline as a motion picture masterpiece and historical record of world importance is in itself worthy of the price of admission, and coupled with a Chaplin comedy composes a two and a half hours show which will undoubtedly attract a large patronage.

The latest film showing the King's tour of the western battlefront is one of the finest pictures shown in connection with the war. It is full of historic and human incidents. The camera man in this film has captured every item of interest from the time of his majesty's arrival in France to his departure for England's shores.

TWENTY STUDENTSHIPS

Sir Adam Beck Has Job for Professor Macallum to Tackle.

Had Great Britain for the last 35 years followed the same enlightened policy with regard to scientific and industrial research as has Germany, there would have been no war. This belief Prof. A. B. Macallum, newly appointed chairman of the scientific research commission, expressed before the Empire Club at luncheon at the St. Charles Hotel yesterday.

Thru the application of science to industry by government subsidy, she had forged ahead until she was in a position to wage the present war, said he. She had spent $400,000 a year in scientific research. Great Britain made an annual grant of £4000 to the Royal Society, and had granted £20,000 for the establishment of the national physics laboratory. Had she spent a million pounds a year for the last 35 years she would have been in a position to stop Germany catching up and taking her industry. Thirty-five millions was a large amount, but it might justly be compared with the $5,000,000,000 which the war was going to cost. The United States already was spending half a million on industrial research. Was this country going to lag behind?

The war would leave a new and peculiar position for the empire to face. Its peoples must be on guard lest they be overrun with the products of German industry. Sir George Foster, in forming the research commission, had taken a step which the speaker could not commend too highly. It was one of the most enlightened things which the government of Canada had ever done.

Use Canadian Brains. The new chairman pointed to various systems which Germany had adopted and which this country might follow with advantage. Chief among them was their policy of fostering research in the schools and colleges. They intended to do the same in Canada. And they were going to foster research. There were not enough of this class in Canada. There was not the inducement. The government had exercised over them the care of a step-mother only. It must be so no longer. Canada had as good brain material as any other country. It would be keener if it were given the chance of development. It was going to get that chance.

The commission would take every possible step to discover young men adapted to become scientific researchers, and having found them it was going to see to their livelihood. They were going to found 20 research studentships, to be developed into research fellowships. The great aim of the commission would be to make Canada efficient.

Sir Adam Beck moved a vote of thanks. He had a job for Prof. Macallum, he said. That was to find a way of utilizing Canada's bountiful supply of water power and fresh air for the manufacture of nitrates to replenish her depleted agricultural lands. He proposed this industry "as a public undertaking at cost to quadruple Canadian agricultural production. In consulting the country on securing the services of Prof. Macallum, Sir Adam said that he could think of no greater opportunity that could be offered to any man than that offered to the speaker of the day.

Canadians must make sacrifices not yet thought of to win the war. That must be the only thought at present; but after the war, were they to come a dormant people, to be overrun by foreign products? "Not while we have the brains and the manhood and the resources with which God has endowed us," he declared.

Dr. McCabe of the technical school, in seconding the vote, said that Canada could well afford the investment made in this way. Toronto's investment of $2,000,000 in founding a school for scientific and industrial instruction would bring great results, he believed.

The attendance at the club was unusually large.

TEACH CHILDREN TO BE CAREFUL

Keynote of Campaign of the Ontario Safety League.

TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS

"Safety Patrols" Established in Schools by the Organization.

That the keynote of the campaign to eliminate accidents and fires, of the Ontario Safety League, is the education of the children, was the declaration of Secretary R. Morley of the league, in an address on "Public Safety Education" before the meeting of the Toronto Insurance Institute, board of trade dining room, last evening.

This education, he said, had two functions, first to teach the school children to be careful, and thru them to give parents an adequate appreciation of the need of reducing accidents in the home.

The league is now establishing "safety patrols" in the schools. These are composed of several older pupils who wear badges and are released from school a few minutes prior to the regular closing hour to prevent the smaller children from filling the roadways, thereby reducing the possibility of accidents.

The war has served to emphasize the need of keeping men physically fit, declared Mr. Morley, and in illustrating his remarks cited his personal case in which he was released from military service to accompany a newspaper because of a minor injury to his right foot.

The league has collected $19,000 from public contributions in three years, and has distributed 100,000 safety buttons to pupils, 150,000 circulars, 125,000 school bulletins, 170,000 circulars, 120,000 letters to parents and awarded $150 in essay prizes. Industrial bulletins are sent regularly to manufacturers and employers of labor.

J. J. Hodgins, inspector of the St. Lawrence Underwriters' Agency, read a paper of "the fire insurance business as a profession." President Blogg of the institute presided.

ON ILL-FATED GRILSE.

Following the seizure of four 50-gallon barrels of whiskey in a shed at the rear of 110 Carlton street, Frank McCabe, who rents the shed, appeared in the police court yesterday on a charge of illegally having liquor in his possession. He was fined $200 and costs or three months.

Frank Hanna was assessed a like amount for a similar misdemeanor.

PARTY LEADERS SEEMED RELIEVED

Hastened to Felicitate Minister of Militia; Elected by Acclamation.

MUCH INCENSE BURNED

Hon. A. E. Kemp Made Most Sensible Utterance of the Occasion.

Amusing sidelights played upon and curious cross currents moved thru the impromptu meeting held at Oddfellows' Hall, Broadview avenue and Queen street, yesterday afternoon following upon the return by acclamation of Hon. A. E. Kemp, as the member for East Toronto. Nearly all the Conservative leaders gathered to pay homage to the new war minister, and nearly all swung the censer with great assiduity. Mr. Kemp himself seemed surprised to learn what a great man he really was and how much the empire depended upon him. More than one speaker all but hinted that Germany would sue for peace when she heard what he had said yesterday in East Toronto! W. I. Wilson, the returning officer, declared the nominations closed and Mr. Kemp elected as soon as the clock struck two. Several gentlemen had their watches out and cautioned that official against delay. Something like a sigh of relief went up from the frock-coated statesmen present, and they hastened at once to the platform in the wake of the new minister.

They included Richard Blain, M.P. for Peel who got in along with Mr. Kemp years ago by attending a Joe Russell "smoker." Mr. Blain took no chances yesterday, but burned the incense of the new minister with great prodigality.

Dr. Pyne Was There. Hon. Dr. Pyne, who fought with Sir Sam Hughes in his last ditch, was on hand to salute his successor. Dr. Pyne claimed to have discovered Mr. Kemp years ago and to be his political godfather, for the way he put Mr. Kemp out of business in 1908.

"If I had beaten him again in 1911," said the smiling Joseph, "I would now be minister of militia."

A. C. Macdonnell, M.P., depicted Mr. Kemp as the greatest and wisest man the empire had ever known, and T. Hook, M.L.A., Captain Tom Wallace, M.P., Mayor Hume and others spoke to the same effect.

E. W. J. Owens, M.L.A., who is also a K.C., made a fine legal argument to the effect that Mr. Kemp, having been elected in 1911, was entitled to serve out his term.

Rejoicing Was General. There was much rejoicing over the unopposed return of Mr. Kemp for East Toronto. One would have thought that the Conservatives had just defeated Sir Wilfrid Laurier in East Quebec. All the speakers were careful to say that the government did not want an election, that this was no time for party politics, and that the result in East Toronto showed that the people of Canada desired the Borden Government to stay in power until the war was over.

Mr. Kemp himself made the most sensible speech of the lot. He said it was the ordinary thing for a cabinet minister who went back for re-election to be returned without opposition. Nevertheless, he appreciated the courtesy of the Liberals in not putting up a candidate. The war so engrossed us all, Mr. Kemp observed, that nobody wanted to talk politics or hear politics. If there were a general election soon it would not be the fault of the government.

The Boy Scouts

Will leave an envelope at your home

The Boy Scouts, ever ready to use their energies in a worthy cause, have found a way to help the Belgian children. They are distributing envelopes containing a letter from the Lord Mayor of London, Chairman of The British National Belgium Relief Committee, and a message from the leaders of the Churches about the

Hungry Belgian Children

The Huns refuse to feed 2,500,000 children in Belgium. You will not let these little children starve while a contribution from your good cheer will help to save them. For every cent helps.

No Sum Too Small—No Sum Too Large

Will you read the letter aloud to your family, obey your generous impulse and return the envelope? The cost of collecting each individual envelope would sadly drain the fund, as you can readily see. So
