COST OF BUILDING STEADILY ADVANCES

Shortage of Mechanics Also Worries Prospective Builders.

The steadily advancing costs of building material and the shortage of mechanics in the building trades is giving people who have plans out for new structures plenty to worry about, and many of them are beginning to wonder whether something cannot be done by those in authority to relieve the situation. Mr. H. Hutson, builder and real estate broker, suggests, as a solution, a prohibitory order against all building of a non-essential nature. "Theatres, banks and public institutions," he says, are being erected now which could very well wait until the serious lack of houses has been supplied. This non-essential work is taking all the available force of mechanics and also bidding up the price of materials to a point where house and office building becomes a grave risk. At present costs, says Mr. Hutson, it is absolutely impossible to build houses for renting. Recently he called for tenders to duplicate a house erected in 1914 and found the costs about 3 to 1 higher. The plastering tender on the 1914 house was $600 and $1,608 on the new; heating, $1,800, against $650, and plumbing showed a similar advance. Houses built now could not be rented to pay a fair return on present building costs, and if non-essential building is allowed to proceed the situation, he thinks, is going to be even worse before fall. "There are millions of dollars' worth of building ready to go on," he continued. "Of course, a great quantity of it has been temporarily shelved owing to the high costs, but there is still enough of it coming out shortly to turn the matter of securing material and labor into a game of grab. Once jobs have been launched builders have to see them thru and stand any kind of a hold-up. Now is the time to help the situation by the appointment of some constituted authority to sift the jobs and hold back those that are not immediately necessary." According to contractors, there are very few apprentices in the building trades. Many of the apprentices went to the war and many of them were killed. The high wages in industries offering work the year round are taking young fellows away from carpentering and brick-laying, which are regarded as seasoned occupations.

JUDGE COMPLIMENTS LADY.

Another instance of the prominent place which women are taking in the business and professional world occurred at Osgoode Hall yesterday morning when Miss Helen Paley, barrister-at-law, appeared before the Honorable Mr. Justice Logie on an appeal from a report of the master-in-ordinary and was highly complimented by the learned judge on her clever argument and presentation of the case. The appearance of a woman counsel in the supreme court of Ontario has been a very rare occurrence in the past, but it is anticipated that it will be more frequent in the days to come.

INQUEST ADJOURNED

Father in Ignorance of How Death of Eight-Year-Old Alex. Somerville Occurred.

Dr. Breslin presided at the coroner's inquest in relation to the death of eight-year-old Alex. Somerville, son of Alexander Wagner Somerville, 12 Hurndale avenue, which occurred on Thursday last, when the unfortunate boy was struck and almost instantly killed, by an auto truck, opposite 97 Danforth avenue. The father is in ignorance as to how the fatality occurred, he told The World, but he gathered that his boy was returning from Franklin Street School at dinner hour on Thursday, and while crossing Danforth avenue to proceed home, was struck by a truck, said to have been in charge of Caleb C. Johnson, 4 Richard avenue. The boy was taken to the office of Dr. Dennis Riordan, at 97 Danforth avenue, but died there within a few minutes. The tragic news was conveyed to Mr. Somerville by a young man, who called at the house, but in the excitement forgot to learn the young man's name. Mr. Somerville, in speaking to The World after the inquest, said he was anxious to learn the name and residence of this young man, so that if this paragraph reaches the eye of the party, Mr. Somerville would be greatly indebted to him if he would call at 12 Hurndale avenue. The proceedings at the inquest were formal and evidence of identification was all that was heard, this being necessary before the body of the boy can be removed for burial today at 3.30 p.m. The inquest was adjourned till Wednesday, March 17, at 8.15.

ACTION DISMISSED.

Mr. Justice Kelly yesterday dismissed with costs the action of the F. P. Weaver Coal Co. against Mayor MacBride and Brantford. The coal company claimed $2,817 for alleged breach of contract.

DRY'S DISAGREEMENT MUCH OVER-ESTIMATED

With regard to the breach between the referendum committee and the Dominion Alliance, Rev. Ben H. Spence, secretary of the latter organization, stated to The World yesterday that this disagreement has been very much over-estimated. "In my opinion, it is not at all serious—merely a difference of opinion," said Mr. Spence. "Every person or organization has a right to an opinion, but because this differs does not signify an open breach." "The Dominion Alliance has asked the government to defer a plebiscite until all legal difficulties in connection with bill 26 are removed by an amendment to this act. The referendum committee asked for a referendum at once and an amendment to the act later if necessary. Whether a vote of the people will be taken or not depends entirely on the decision of the government. We are content to abide by this decision. The temperance forces are united in a fight for a bone-dry Ontario."

MASHER INSULTS HELLO GIRLS

William Cass was fined $10 and costs by Magistrate Cohen in police court yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct. A policeman said that Cass stationed himself near the West End Telephone Exchange and accosted several of the operators as they came out of the building. According to the policeman, Cass' usual greeting to the fair sex was: "Well, dearie, you gave me the wrong number." "That was not the conduct of a gentleman," remarked the magistrate, as he imposed the fine.
