And these are tokens and the surken eye—
Where sorrow dweils will fendest love appear;
His tracest language is the secret sigh,
His aweetest connecen the silent tear:
But where the glow and bloom of health are nigh,
Be sure that he is absent—for his sphere
Is in the grief-worn heart—there he doth dwell,
Like sainted hormit in his lonely cell.

Is in the grief-worn heart—there he doth dwell, Like sainted hermit in his lonely cell.

Tremendout.—A Rio Janeiro paper of April 13th, contains an account of a violent thusderstorm which descended upon Port Alegro on the 11th March. The rain fell in torrents, and the lightning struck in several places. A powder-house about a lengue from the city, containing 37,509 lbs. of powder was struck and blow to atoms. The explosion shock the whole city, like an earthquake. The houses on the margin of the river of lets injury. All the materials of the powder-house were thrown to the distance of more than 200 rads; the foundations were torn up, and not a like or bean was left. The woods in the immediate vicinity were swept down; and the largest trees form up by the roots.—[N. Y. Jour. Commerce.]

The bashful man is like a tiger: he makes but one effort, and if that fails, slinks away to his jungle, and essays not another.—I myself have any now experience to souch for this; having in the favoof days of my gallantry, full many a time and oft, in dining out, gathered myself together with a gallant ferocity to ask the lady of the feast for the honor of a glass of wine with her.—But alas! If peradventure the lady listened not to my first demonstration, I was prone to relapse into an auter and insensible incapacity to repent the mighty effort—the sound of my voice died suddenly, and word spoke I never more.—The Dutchman's Firestice.

mighty effort—the sound of my voice died suddenly, and word spoke I never more.—The Datchman's Fixesite.

Hypochondriasis, or the Blac Devils.—We are apt to believe a merry companion the happiest fellow in the world, and envy him, perhaps, his light heart and airy spirits; but such men have hours of melancholy, when the spirits sink, and a gloom comes over them, deeper and darker than is over known to their less excitable companions.—A man may be cheefful on paper, though he has a heavy heart, and brilliant in company, though sufficiently wretched when left to commune with his own soul. The extremes of low and high spirits, which occur in the same person at different times, are happily illustrated by the following case, related by Dr. Rush:—"A Physician in one of the cities of Italy was once consulted by a gentleman who was much distressed by a paroxysm of the intermitting state of hypochondriacism. He advised the melancholy man to seek relief in convivial company, and recommended him in particular to finit—t a celebrated wit by the name of Cardini, who kept all the tables of the city, to which he was invited, in a roar of laughter, and to spend as much time with him as possible."

"Alas! Sir," said the patient with a heavy sigh, "I am that Cardini,"—Med. Chir. Rev.

Good Reason for staving Out or a were Good Reason for staying Out of a wet Night,—We were toiling along Water street one evening during the late rains, when the pavement was covered to the depth of six or eight inches, with the streams pouring from adjacent lanes. At a corner where the swellen gutter was rushing by at the rate of ten nots an hour, we discovered a body lying at full length, the face downwards, and the muddy current making a clear breach from head to heels, over the carcase. Upon inspection, we ascertained it to be the hulk of a well known bibler, who was then bacchiplenus. We roused him by the application of a hearty whack on the shoulder, and enquired what he could be doing there.—He lifted up his head from the whirlpool, and the opposite lamp disclosed an expression which was the most singularly ludicrous picture of distress we ever saw, "Oh," said he, and his head sank back as he spoke, "I agreed to meet a man here."—[Boston Galaxy.

SALE OF A WIFE.—At one of those disgraceful exhibitions—the sale of a wife by her husband—which took place in Manchester (Eng.) some time since, the husband officiated
as auctioneer for disposing of his lockless rib.

Who'll buy a wife," said he, "a fine wife, a handsome wife?" "And say a good wife," whispered she. "No, no," rejoined the husband, "I won't cheat them."

Papers have been received this morning, from Van Dieman's Land, to the 20th of November, They are filled with accounts of a very serious insurrection among the black natives. His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor (Arthur) had been in the field for more than six weeks, at the head of a sort of army, composed of men, women, and children, to the amount of 6,000 persons. The object of the Governor is to hem the natives on every side, and to drive them on to a peninsula, called Tasman, which contains about 70,000 acres, and which is joined to the main land by an isthmus, not more than 300 or 400 yards wide. The line of the British extended at one time 60 miles, in a sort of semicircle. When the accounts came away, this line had been reduced to about twenty miles; and the report was that they had enclosed the the of the aborigines, who, it was expected, the of the aborigines of the of the aborigines, who, it was expected, the of the aborigines of the of the aborigi
