CANADA'S INTEREST IN LEAGUE GROWS

DOMINION STAFF AT GENEVA IS INCREASED TO 8

Five Attached to Secretariat and Three to International Labor Office

WOMAN NAMED TO INFORMATION SECTION

Miss Henderson of Winnipeg Will Act as Link With Home Country

Canadian Press. GENEVA, Aug. 20.—That Canada is taking a growing interest in day-to-day League of Nations activities is evidenced by the recent opening of permanent offices on the Quai De Mont Blanc, and increase of the Canadian representation at the secretariat of the League and the International Labor Bureau.

W. A. Riddell, Canada's permanent representative at the League, is in charge of the Canadian bureau, which contains a number of Canadian Daily newspapers, and which is frequented by a large number of visitors from the Dominion.

NEW CHIEF ARRIVES. Professor Mack Eastman, of Vancouver, a professor at the University of British Columbia, recently arrived in Geneva to become chief of general studies in the research division of the labor office.

Canadian women will henceforth have a representative as well as a champion in the information section of the league. Miss Elsie Henderson, of Winnipeg, a graduate of Manitoba University, has just joined the staff of this important section.

She will keep in touch with the constant flow of information which is being sent in general way with the women's organizations of Canada, which are interested in international affairs and particularly League of Nations' ideals and activities.

There are now Canadian attaches at the League secretariat and three at the labor office. Sir Herbert Ames of Montreal occupies the responsible post of financial director of the League.

WANT DOLLAR BILLS THAT LAST LONGER

U. S. Government Seeks Paper That Will Stand Hard Usage Better.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Intensive studies to find out how to make the $1 bill last longer are being conducted jointly by the Bureau of Efficiency and the Bureau of Standards. The government manufactures 200,000,000 of these bills a year, but, due to the quality of the material now used, they wear out sooner than the experts think they should, and must be replaced.

The paper used is made from rags, about 75 per cent. linen and 25 per cent. cotton, but, as the rag supply is under constant strain, experiments are being carried on to see if the Government can produce paper from other materials. Other manufacturers have been using such materials as wood pulp, manila hemp, and African grass called esparto, rami, and Kansas wheat straw. Other manufacturers have been using these, while the Government has been clinging to rags.

Hardships which paper undergoes at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving are being studied. Veteran printers declare the paper gets "tired" under the processes it constantly goes through while being made into money. It must be wetted, printed, dried, wetted again, printed on the other side, artificially dried again, printed again, and counted a hundred times. The printers say that it should be allowed to rest, to cure and to age between these processes.

The bureau has its own papermaking machine, which can produce paper from various materials. It has machines for testing papers, that fold them until they break, and count the number of folds; that rub them until a hole comes and record the endurance; and that pull strips of paper in two and measure their strength.

In the end the Government will find out whether the paper it has been using for a generation is all that it should be.

Not For Sale, Says Policeman To Briber

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A patrolman is not a piece of merchandise, to be bought and sold like so much beefsteak, said Patrolman Dugan, as he arrested Charles Loder, a butcher, for attempted bribery.

Dugan said he noticed Loder selling meat in violation of the Sunday law and started in to serve Loder with a summons. Loder saw him, he arrested and slammed the door, catching the fingers of the patrolman's right hand. Loder swung open the door and strode inside.

Then, Dugan said, Loder dug deep and produced two crumpled one dollar bills.

"Can't we fix this thing up?" asked Loder, according to the patrolman.

COL. E. M. HOUSE

YELLOW CAB MERGER EFFECT SEPT. 1

Operation of Truck Division of General Motors Approved by Shareholders.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Operation of the Yellow Cab Manufacturing Company, which will guarantee peace between France and Germany by guaranteeing the present frontiers, is the biggest question in the world.

"It is far more important than the question of unemployment, the chronic depression in trade, the matter of international debts."

"For all these things, big as they are, cannot be settled until European peace is made secure. Until this is accomplished, there will be unrest and uneasiness and nervousness and pessimism in Europe."

"Men and nations cannot settle down. That affects trade. It helps bring about unemployment. It cuts down national revenues and when treasuries are empty or crippled it's no use talking about international debts."

The man who was speaking was Colonel E. M. House, who is here on his annual pilgrimage to Europe. He was the one time ambassador extraordinary from Wilson to all the statesmen of Europe.

TELLS OF PART. He was telling an informative tale with two of the foremost statesmen of Britain when he was good enough to chat with me for a few minutes.

"The security pact," said Col. House, "was proposed by Germany to France. I gather that England, Belgium, France, and other palaces are all in the fire."

"It will be a slow process. There will be many parleys, but in the end I hope and believe something definite will be accomplished."

"But won't the matter of the Polish frontiers, which Germany at present guarantees, toss all this free in the fire?"

RENEWED SITUATION. "I believe not," said Col. House. "I think a formula will be found. If I were a German I would be more anxious to come to an amicable arrangement than even a Frenchman could be."

"Just consider the situation for a moment. France wants peace and security above all things else. She has experienced three tremendous disappointments since the signing of the armistice."

"The first was when America and England failed to rally to the aid of France against aggression by Germany. Since then there have been other confuses, and other palaces where agreements were drawn up, but they always came to nothing. They were not ratified."

"If now the present proposed security pact goes by the boards, the French will lose heart and hope. Before the war they at least had as an ally a powerful and militant Russia. Now they have only the promised help of small nations to the east which have their own tremendous troubles."

"So you mustn't be surprised if France takes things into her own hands if the present proposals fail."

"The French flag has been hauled down and the French troops have been withdrawn from the Ruhr in accordance with French promises. But France, despairing of any amicable settlement, would be sorely tempted to take matters into her own hands and no power could restrain her."

"At present France is victorious and well armed. Germany is beaten and disarmed. There will be the strongest temptation to France to use her might while there is still time and opportunity."

"If the world will not help her in her longing for security in the future, she will naturally feel she must rely on her own resources. And then anything might happen."

"That's why I say every German should earnestly praying that the proposed security pact should become an accomplished fact. Once that is achieved, Europe can settle down and approach her other problems."

COLONEL HOUSE SAYS SECURITY PACT FOREMOST

Declares Question of Adoption or Rejection Holds First Place

HOPEFUL OF SEEING RESULT ACHIEVED

Takes Stand That Germany Would Do Well to Endorse Proposal

Explorer Leaves To Search For Race of Branded Savages

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 19.—The world's youngest explorer left here today to search for branded savages of Central and South America, whom he believes to be remnants of an ancient Aryan race who, migrated to this hemisphere in the dim past.

J. J. Bliss, 19, accompanied by a University of Minnesota student, will attempt to motor the entire distance. If he succeeds in reaching Ecuador by automobile it will be the first time the journey has been made overland. Bliss is taking dynamite with him to blast a way when the jungle becomes impassable by ordinary methods.

The Bliss theory of the origin of the tribes he is seeking, several members of whom he saw on a previous trip, but whose villages he was unable to locate, is based partly on the ancient tales of the Aryan race, which he noted branded on their faces.

It was this which led him to surmise that the last remnants of Aryan tribes supreme in Asia in pre-historic times. The one tribe in Ecuador has the sign branded on the faces of its members. The central American tribe uses the same sign on its pottery.

Bliss plans to bring back several members of the "lost race" if he is successful in discovering their villages. On a previous trip he encountered a number of the branded savages but was unable to trace them to their homes.

The region inhabited by the central American tribe has been visited but once by white men, he says. According to an ancient legend a ship once penetrated an unexplored river between Nicaragua and Honduras but the members of the expedition were killed.

Despite the young explorer's earnestness his father considers the journey a "wild goose chase."

"I know nothing of the lost tribes but I think the boy is looking for a media in a haystack," said the elder Bliss after bidding his son good-bye. "He has always been a roamer. He has never been able to keep him at home. But if anyone can get through those jungles, he can."

TRAIN CONVICTS TO EARN LIVING, SAYS NEW CHIEF

United States Superintendent of Prisons Gives His Views

WANTS PLANTS FOR FEDERAL PRISONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Teach convicts the habits of industry. Give them a chance to earn some money—accumulate a "stake" to fall back on when they are released.

Train them to earn their own living honestly after they leave the "pen."

This is the programme of Luther C. White, new U. S. superintendent of prisons. White, to carry out his programme, will ask Congress at its next session to approve the equipment of all federal prisons with large, modern manufacturing plants.

Establishment of such plants, he said, will accomplish the three ends which he has in view and will be the greatest reformative measure that could possibly be taken.

WORK HABIT IMPORTANT. "Getting a man into the habit of working is all important," he said. "Once he forms the habit, it is very apt to stick—and work will keep almost anyone out of trouble. Also, he should be paid for the work he does while in the penitentiary. This will give him a little money to send his dependents, and it will give him something to strive for when he gets out until he finds a job. Even if it isn't much, perhaps only $50—he would have to do it immediately to his old gang for aid."

"Teaching a man to earn his living honestly by training him to work with up-to-date machinery is another great factor in keeping him from future trouble. If a man is equipped to obtain and hold a good job, the chances are in favor of his doing it. But to do all this we must have modern manufacturing facilities in our prisons. We have some now, but not nearly enough."

They employ only a small percentage of the prisoners. That is why I am going to make my appeal to Congress. If I am successful, I will feel that a great step has been taken toward curing our prison ills."

PRISONERS TOO CROWDED. White characterized federal prison conditions as being satisfactory on the whole, except for a tendency toward overcrowding. As a result, the government is forced to send some of the prisoners to state prisons.

"This is no easy thing to do," he said, "as most of our state prisons are crowded. Also, some of them do not come up to our requirements, and we are therefore sent to state institutions."

White said that he was willing to tell his right name to Judge Bleakley if he would keep it secret. Judge Bleakley promised to do so and refused to divulge it. It was learned later that "Nelson" gave the name of Roy Elliott and his family's place of residence as Nashville, Tenn.

"Nelson" or Elliott pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with burglary of the home of Frederick Harry of Mount Vernon, on July 27. While confined in the Mount Vernon jail he attempted suicide by beating his head against the door of his cell. He huffed against the door three times before he became unconscious and was removed to the Mount Vernon Hospital.

GIRL DENOUNCED. Prisoner Held Without Bail on Charge of Defrauding Hotels.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Miss Marietta B. Gallahue, 21 years old, who said she was an actress, a moving picture actress, a graduate of Syracuse University and a native of Paris, was denounced as a confidence woman by Justice Daniel F. Murphy, who remanded her without bail pending sentence. She was convicted of defrauding the Baltimore Hotel out of $106, her bill there for 10 days.

Wilfred F. Olsen, credit manager of the Baltimore, said Miss Gallahue told him she would pay her bill as soon as an estate in which she was interested was settled. Mr. Olsen said she owed a bill to the Baltimore Hotel in Atlanta, Ga., also. M. J. Dugan of the Hotel McAlpin told the Justice the defendant owed a bill of $73 there. He said she registered at the McAlpin under another name.

NO WONDER! PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 20.—Ershy Slovensky Ojersky Kretzko Lemor Potoryoy Spok Swatawaw Archanchela and his wife submitted to full fledged papers with the county clerk here to change its name to First Benevolent Society of St. Michael Archangel. The former name took too much space on letterheads and its meaning was not sufficiently clear, officers of the society declared.

OUT ON BAIL. Clifford Moller, who is awaiting trial on a serious charge, has been released on bail. The bail was $5,000, $2,000 himself, and two sureties of $1,500 each.
