Sir Nicholas Grattan-Doyle, Recently Knighted, is Hero of Romantic Story.

London, Feb. 29-Sir Nicholas Grattan-Doyle, knighted by King George last week, and a prominent member of par-liament, is the hero of one of the most omantic stories in public life.

He was born in Wexford, Ireland, and lived there as a young man. One season an American millionaire, John Nevins of East Orange, New Jersey, came to Ireland to hunt with the Wexford hounds. One day while at the hunt headquarters, Mr. Nevins had an argument with one of the English member of the hunt, whom he accused of in sulting him.

Finally Mr. Nevins said in anger, "If I were a younger man I would give you a good thrashing."
