IN THE CHURCHES

At the nine o'clock mass in the Cathedral yesterday morning, His Grace Archbishop O'Connell spoke most impressively on the parable of the grain of mustard seed, the smallest of seeds, but which, being planted, became a tree in which the birds of the air found shelter.

He also applied the parable to the St. John diocese. It wanted, he said, still eight years before the hundredth anniversary of the church in St. John was reached.

The collections taken in the Cathedral yesterday for the St. Vincent de Paul Society amounted to $730.50.

Rev. J. A. Morison, P.D., commenced his pastorate in the Carlton Presbyterian church yesterday and preached at the service.

Rev. Dr. Reilly preached on Catholic immigration and the work of the Society of St. Monica yesterday morning in St. Joseph's church at Silver Falls.

In Leinster street Baptist church last evening Rev. W. Camp delivered an impressive sermon, taking his text as "It was night, and Christ had not come yet."

His Lordship Bishop Richardson, of Fredericton, is in the city and preached last night to a large congregation at the Mission church.

Official allowance liquor laws to be broken every day, the greed of bar-tenders, "intelligent" parental solicitude, and legal cigarette sales are features existing in St. John which tend to endanger the morals and career of the young man according to charges preferred by Rev. William Lawson in his sermon "Is a Young Man Safe," delivered in Zion church last evening.

As a remedy Rev. Mr. Lawson suggested prohibition, more consideration on the part of the parents of the needs of the boy and girl, better attendance at church, and marriage as soon as a suitable helpmate could be selected.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IS NOW AGITATING THE DANISH PARLIAMENT

Copenhagen, Nov. 18.—The question of woman suffrage is now before the Danish House of Commons, and is arousing widespread interest.

The Danish premier has introduced the measure for this purpose. Two points are involved. One, the manner of election for the Landsting (upper house); and two, the lowering of the qualifying voting age for the lower house, from 30 to twenty-five years, together with the extension of this franchise to women.

With regard to the Landsting, it is proposed to abolish certain privileges, such as the nomination of twelve members directly by the king, and to elect the remainder in this city but they enjoyed only intermittent services, and it was not until 1850 that the city had a resident priest.

The diocese was established in 1802 by His Lordship Bishop Dollard. His Grace then referred to those who had followed Bishop Connelly, Bishop Swenson and himself. He spoke of the vast Cathedral congregation and fifty other large congregations now included in the diocese.

FIVE THOUSAND MONTEGRIAN WINTER SOLDIERS

Experience of an English Army Officer in the Balkans

TRANSPORT BY WIVES

Bravery of These Women Unparalleled Anywhere—Recklessness of Danger and Death Cause of Big Losses Among Troops

London, Nov. 17.—Major E. H. Richardson, a well-known breeder of bloodhounds and other dogs for military and police purposes, just returned from Montenegro, writes the Daily Chronicle a vivid account of his experiences.

Major Richardson went originally to see how dogs could be utilized in the present campaign, and although he did not manage to get the results he had in mind in Tripoli and Morocco, he yet saw a good deal of the opening incidents of the war.

He early visited the wounds of the hospital at Cetinje and found them full of patients heaped up in the hospital, he said bravely, "I sat by the bedside of a Montenegrin who had returned from America, and just had a leg amputated," said Major Richardson, "and he assured me with a smile that he was only too glad to lose his limb for his country."

The brave women of the Montenegrin women are unequalled. All the young women, the wives and sweethearts of the soldiers, have gone to the front and carry the provisions, do the cooking, wash the linen. The Montenegrins have no Army Service Corps, the men declaring that they regard fighting as the only duty of a soldier, and as there is no transport, the troops are unable to move many miles from their base. All the transport work is done by women and it is estimated that 5,000 women have gone to the front to attend to their lords and masters.

Montenegro, Major Richardson met the Montenegrin Major Xerxes and Milica, whom he described as "most charming personalities." They were working like slaves in the hospitals, he said, "and were hoping, when I saw them, to be sent to the front to attend to their relations in Italy and Russia. Assistance of that sort is very urgently needed for the number of casualties has been greatly increased in the reports that have been allowed to come through. The hospitals are undermanned, the doctors are overworked."

"This was before any of the Red Cross contingents came from other countries, but the conditions must still be deplorable. In one of the wards I visited, nine were crawling thickly over the faces of the wounded soldiers and the odor was so overpowering that I had to come out."

Wailing of the Women

"On the way, passing over a high mountain road," he said, "I heard rising from the valley beneath a long drawn-out wailing sound. It was the wailing of the village 'baenings' for their menfolk who had been slain in battle. The sound of their sorrowing rolled up from the valley, and was most heart-breaking to listen to in the clear morning air."

The number of casualties on the Montenegrin side in which they exposed themselves in frontal attacks. In one of these attacks, he said, between 500 to 600 men, and King Nicholas thereupon gave orders that the men should not take such risks recklessly. As an instance of their reckless bravery, Major Richardson mentioned that on one occasion an officer gave an order for his men to retire, but they ignored his order and took the position they had been storming at the point of the bayonet.

Continuing his journey, past the village of the wailing women, Major Richardson reached Rike, at the bottom of the valley, where King Nicholas has his winter palace.

"This village," he said, "was full of wounded. There was no hospital, but all the houses were full, and the men were

MISS POWERS' DEATH DUE TO NATURAL CAUSES

Boston Bath Tub Mystery Cleared and Cummings is Released

Boston, Nov. 17.—Medical Examiner Dr. George B. Magrath, who performed the autopsy on the body of Miss Marjory G. Powers called at the office of District Attorney Pelletier and reported that the young woman had died from dilation of the heart.

What was regarded as a deep mystery was speedily cleared up by the police and the whole case soon after the discovery of the dead body in the bathtub was put up to the medical examiner.

District Attorney Pelletier reported that Miss Powers was in normal condition. Friends of Arthur T. Cummings have steadfastly held to his innocence of any wrong intent.

Captain Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation was present at the following official statement relative to the Revere House case.

Dr. George Burges Magrath, medical examiner, performed an autopsy in the case of Miss Marjory G. Powers and has reported to me that it was his opinion that death was due to natural causes, viz: per acute thrombus glands and dilation of the heart. There is no indication of drowning and no physical condition signifying suicidal intent.

After consulting with Doctor Magrath and the other members of the medical staff, I am of the opinion that there is no evidence of any criminal act and no evidence on which to base criminal proceedings.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SHIPPING

Lecture in Opera House By William R. Rathvon

Wm. R. Rathvon, of the board of Lecturers of the first church of Christ Scientist, Boston, addresses a gathering in the Opera House yesterday afternoon. Hon. John E. Wilson presided.

Mr. Rathvon traced the history of Christian Science from its origin with Mr. Eddy and outlined some of the principal doctrines, laying emphasis on the doctrine that Heaven is a state of mind and not a place.

In discussing their dependence on mental suggestion for the cure of disease the lecturer drew attention to the influence of the mind on the body when affected by grief, anger or other emotions and argued that the mind could also exert a beneficial influence when the body was diseased.
