Shortens the Visits.

An officer of a large business concern found the notices, "This is My Busy Day" and "He Who Talks and Runs Away May Live to Talk Another Day," which were posted in his room. He said: "Friends would 'drop in,' sit down and take up valuable time with idle gossip. His private office contained several upholstered chairs and a settee, which one day were removed by his order and have never been replaced. Since then all visitors have been compelled to stand, except when a certain bill is rung, which the attendant knows means 'Bring a chair.'—New York Tribune.

A "Wireless" Newspaper.

The inhabitants of the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, who are deprived of ordinary communication with the mainland for half the year, are in future to be provided with a week end wireless news dispatch at the expense of the Canadian government. Each dispatch, which will average 1600 words, will be placed in the hands of all the ministers of religion, who will read the mainland news to their congregations after each service.

Short, Sharp and Effective.

The commercial law of China has little chance of adoption in this country, but it is short, sharp and effective, containing only these four rules: Those who deal with merchants unfairly are to be beheaded. Those who interrupt commerce are to be beheaded. Those who attempt to close the markets are to be beheaded. Those who maintain the prosperity of commerce are to be rewarded.

More Than She Asked.

She—If we are going to be married you must give up smoking.

He—Well, said he, "the last time I was there you told me that if I wished to save enough to get married on I must stop spending money foolishly, and I took you at your word."

At Her Word.

"Why do you not come to me for advice any more?" said the medium to her former regular customer.

Mother—I said he, "the last time I was there you told me that if I wished to save enough to get married on I must stop spending money foolishly, and I took you at your word."

Realistic.

Mrs. Brush—Did you see my husband's painting, "The Country Road," at the exhibition?

Mr. Painter—No, I did not. Was it good?

"Why, it was so natural that he had to oil the road every day to keep the dust from going on anything."

Daily in Diemay.

Dorothy—Mother, when I get married shall I have a husband like papa?

Mother—Certainly, my dear.

Dorothy—And if I stay single shall I be an old maid like Aunt Anna?

"No, Susie, I think you will."

Dorothy (with a deep sigh)—Well, I am in a fix.—Boston Transcript.

The Confession of a Heroine.

"And you didn't promise to obey" in the marriage service?

"No, Susie, I didn't."

"That was brave."

"Yes, but honest, Susie, I'd sooner have said it than lose him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Social Centres Needed.

Mr. Edward Gurney, in a letter to The Christian Guardian, offers some suggestions which have been accepted to a visit to the West, where he was impressed by the isolation of farm life on the prairie. The life is too lonely, and means, and there is no doubt but that hundreds of people trekking the northwest have avoided hunger and even starvation by making a meal on a muskrat or muskrat skin.—L. E. Clendenen in Toronto Globe.

Mr. Gurney sees in church union, to which he found Western people of all denominations favorable, a means of a people united to have such of the church buildings as union would render vacant transformed into social clubs or meeting places, with libraries established therein, that provision be made for concerts, old-fashioned tea-meetings and moving-picture shows. Mr. Gurney says as to the benefits:

1. The women and children would have something to look forward to.

2. The men would have a centre of social interest far more wholesome than the tavern or grocery.

3. The church would be brought into the life of the church as a centre of moral influence.

If undertaken it should be done by authority of the United Church. It should be entered upon after grave consideration as a department of church work, and should be controlled by the regular officers of the church.

"Ghastly Hash."

Prof. Grant, of Queen's University, Kingston, a son of the distinguished Principal Grant, was anxious at one stage in his student career to win the approval of Prof. MacNaughton, his instructor in Greek. Accordingly he submitted to a grind of several days on a particular passage of translation, hoping against hope that the fearless and frank professor would call upon him to give the passage before his class.

The day arrived, and Mr. Grant confided to a few of his comrades that he had spent much earnest thought upon his Greek, and was indeed willing to give a demonstration. Whether by telepathic influence or not, Prof. MacNaughton, called upon the young man arose to bewilder his fellows and his instructor.

At the conclusion he looked proud, expecting a nod of approval from the platform, but he caught only a growl of horror-stricken amazement.

"Ghastly hash," Grant, roared the professor. "Ghastly and impossible hash, sir. That is all I have to say."

And Grant's knee-joints collapsed instantly.—Star Weekly.

Versatility in Climate.

The versatility of the Canadian climate leaves nothing to be desired. On Dominion Day there was snow in New Brunswick, sunshines in Ontario, cyclones in Saskatchewan, hail in Alberta, and sunshine on the coast.—Vancouver Province.

THE MUSKRAT.

He is a Profitable Little Fellow For the Trapper.

The muskrat plays a vital part in the advance guard of civilization in western and northern Canada. The muskrat coat is an elegant and comfortable garment, and fashion has ordained the rat shell (cloth lined) to a place of special distinction among ladies' furs.

The trapper ordinarily receives twelve and a half cents per hide to fifty cents, according to the quality, the season in which it is caught, the care exercised in skinning and stretching, and, lastly, and not least, according to his good judgment in placing in a market which will or will not pay well for the same.

It is a comparatively easy task to skin a muskrat. Fleecing the hide requires great care and considerable time. Willows can be bent into stretchers, but the trapper must stretch his rats on thin boards such as are obtainable from packing cases.

The trapper finds his way to the tanneries, after which they are cut into backs and fronts by the furriers, who make them up for their trade.

The revenue from muskrat pelts is no inconsiderable amount. Contented with the muskrat, the trapper at thirty-five cents each, which is a good average, and you know approximately what the trapper made. The muskrat's charge is comparatively small, probably about ten cents per skin. But by the time the finished garment reaches the wearer, due allowance being made for workmanship, he will likely conclude that muskrat is still making a good thing of the muskrat trade.

And yet all has not been said in regard to the muskrat. He belongs to the groundhog family, and judging from the usual contents of his stomach—grass and herbs—appears to be a vegetarian. Not infrequently he comes into contact with man and the bill fare of fashionable resorts.

But in the west (where a man cannot pack a butcher shop hundreds of miles) when there is nothing else to eat he's just plain rat, and there are days when rain and wind drive ducks, chickens, rabbits and most small game out of sight. At such times, when the muskrat is hungry, he will not be so particular as to eat grass and herbs, but will turn to the more substantial food of the muskrat, and there are days when rain and wind drive ducks, chickens, rabbits and most small game out of sight.
