The Best for Teething Babies
SAVED BABY!
Mrs. Wm. Burke, 106 Mitchell Avenue, Toronto writes:
"I take great pleasure in recommending Garter's Teething Powders as they saved my baby's life last summer. When he was seven months old he suffered from constipation, attended with fever and indications and no signs of cutting teeth. A neighbor recommended your Garter's Teething and Fever Powders and gave him three with no apparent benefit and was feeling discouraged, but this lady persuaded me to continue giving them, which I did with best results. In less than three weeks he cut two teeth and has remained well until a short time ago. I had neglected giving him the powder as directed, twice weekly, but started again and once again I am happy to say he is healthy."

REVERIES OF A SPINSTER.
Anyhow, it's my own fault. I've had plenty of offers in my time. That's more than that sneaking Delia Hykes can say. Men used to rave about my complexion. It hasn't changed so much. I've never seen a man that was worth sitting up till after midnight either with or for. I could have had Lal Quinby if I had wanted him, but who would marry a man that had swallowed his chin? I don't have half as much trouble as Mag Spatterwell has, and she's only been married ten years. Looks a hundred years old. Still, I don't like to see impudent men get up and offer me a seat when I go inside a street car. I take the seat, but I look daggers at 'em. There's some married women that don't want to acknowledge they're growing old. Mrs. Higginsworthy tries to dress like a young girl, and she makes a perfect young of herself. She is fifty-seven if she's a day. I suppose some men would laugh at me because I think so much of Tabby, but I would rather have a clean cat about the house than a man with a nasty old pipe and a three days' growth of beard. I don't have to sew anybody's buttons on, either.—Chicago Tribune.

VALUE OF ORGANIZATION FOR WOMEN.

"Times change and we change with them." New duties confront us today. If it was ever true that it was the duty of women to look only to the comfort of their families, leaving all broader questions to the care of men, that day has gone past. Organization has come, giving a broader outlook, teaching the duty of taking a firm grasp on the work of the world, which is as truly the work of women as of men.

One half of the community cannot attend to the needs of all the people. We are in the beginning of a striving for better things. It is our privilege to reach out and clasp hands for the glad work of helping others. Progress is the distinctive characteristic of mankind. The bird builds a nest that meets the needs of its family life, but there is no improvement over the rest of its kind a hundred years ago. The bee constructs the same honeycomb to-day that it did in Solomon's time. Perhaps all animal life below man has the right to say: "This is the way my forefathers always did and it is good enough for me." But mankind must accept new methods, must progress. Organization is the working factor of society. They are adjustable to the needs of the hour and the cause. They can plan and change their plans. No one organization can rightly claim wisdom sufficient to look after all the interests of society. The time has fully come when each interest must look after itself because the world's interests are so varied, and while they do not really conflict they differ so widely that differing qualities of mind are required to carry each onward to success.

Organization is the result of growth, but on the other hand there can be but little growth and development without organization. You organize because you have gained in knowledge. You will gain in knowledge through organization. Organization suggests doing something. It is not the end sought, but is the means toward accomplishing that end. No one thing indicates how far we have developed more than our ability to combine with others for a noble purpose. Men have been learning this valuable lesson for years, but too long it was believed that women could not work together. The time is over past for us to cherish exclusiveness and narrowness as virtues. Now we should seek breadth and large mindedness. Reaching out to others should become a law of our life. The time has come to learn the lesson that to serve one well we must serve all; that what is for the general good is good for the individual. In association selfish feeling gets the least chance for expression. Through working with others we learn to view affairs from a common standpoint, to lay aside prejudice and listen to argument with fairness; a habit which broadens the mind and quickens the sympathies. We learn where our personal rights end and others begin. This is the mission and use of parliamentary law. It is a good sign that organizations of women are learning strict observance of rules of order. This means more than merely understanding methods of transacting public business properly. It is an indication of an all-around broadening and toleration. Remember that "In the multitude of counsel there is wisdom." So, whatever cause your heart desires, take others with you who believe in the same; make it a central thought; plan and work for its advancement with patient continuance, accepting no apparent defeat and some day the reward shall be yours.—Ex.

Things in General

The election campaigns in the four Torontos have been marked by several unusual features, and it is doubtful if either party ever faced more complicated conditions in this city than are to be found in at least two of the ridings. But in no respect does any other Toronto contest appear more extraordinary to those who see beneath the surface and know the direction of the quiet undercurrents, than the contest between Mr. Foy and Mr. Rogers, the much respected nominees in South Toronto. For some time it has been evident that in this constituency there were the makings of a keen and interesting fight, and it looked as if a mighty effort would be put forth in behalf of Mr. Rogers, who made a creditable run against the same opponent four years ago. It is already common property that for one cause or another there is no superabundance of funds in the Toronto Liberal Association's Treasury with which to prosecute the campaign of any of the candidates—with the possible exception of East Toronto, where the Liberal nominee is said to be dependent on local sources of supply. And it is known that South Toronto in particular, is being starved for money in this fight. Mr. Rogers made a heavy financial sacrifice in his attempt to wrest the riding from the Conservatives four years ago. Both on that account and because there was no other available candidate who could hope to do as well as he, Mr. Rogers had a claim upon the South Toronto nomination, and he was very properly regarded as the logical choice of the convention. Could some of the Liberal big-wigs of the town have had their way, however, he would not have been the choice. And now that he is in the field as the duly accredited candidate of the Liberal party, it would seem that these influential personages, to whom Mr. Rogers is not the ideal candidate, are quietly bending their energies to shoulder him to the wall.

This is not a question of party politics, but of decency and fair play, of the right of the ordinary voter to have his say politically, and of whether men who have money are also to have the making or unmaking of popular representation in their hands. Mr. Rogers, as can easily be imagined, has made himself obnoxious to a certain class of financial magnates through his long identification with the Retail Merchants' Association, of which he is the president. This Association has been active in safeguarding the interests of retailers against the crushing opposition of the departmental stores. It has been vigilant in watching and attacking the assessments of these great corporations, with a view to placing them on a more level footing with the small merchant and shopkeeper. In carrying out the policy of the Association, Mr. Rogers has shown characteristic energy and tenacity. South Toronto is a constituency in which the departmental stores can exercise a great measure of influence. The connection of cause and effect is obvious. If it is true that Mr. Rogers' campaign is being paralyzed for lack of funds and by secret opposition, let the reason be known. It is unjust that a man who has already put up handsomely for his party should be again practically forced to shoulder an exhausting financial burden or see his chances of election dissipated before a vote is polled. It is unjust that any candidate, be he Liberal or Conservative, should be made the victim of a clique operating in the dark to punish him for fidelity to a legitimate movement, such as that of the Retail Merchants' Association. If it is true that the department store Juggernauts are determined to grind Mr. Rogers beneath its wheels, let the people of South Toronto know that that is the case, and let the people attend to the issue. The place where those Liberals whose gods are in the department stores could have fairly opposed Mr. Rogers was in their party convention. If they could not beat him there, and knew they need not attempt to, why should they try to gag him on the subject of assessment reform, and failing to compromise him or to extract pledges as to what he would or would not do if elected to the Legislature, why should these people be permitted to give him the knife without a word of protest from a single Toronto newspaper, even those supporting the Government and supposedly anxious for the success of as many Liberal candidates as possible? Are the leaders of the Liberal party aware of what has been taking place, and if so where do they propose to stand in such a conflict? And how about organized labor? Has its recent experience in the printers' strike been such that it can afford to stand by and see any candidate, be he called by the name Liberal or by the name Conservative, offered up as a sacrifice to interests hostile to the organization of the retail merchants, hostile to the organization of labor, hostile in fact to all organization save their own?

LOVE LAUGHS AT LOCKSMITHS.
An El Paso, Tex., special to The Chicago Record of May 17 says: For love's sweet sake, Senorita Maria Gonzales, a beautiful descendant of the house of the Montezumas, aided by her sister, broke open the dungeon at Jimulco, Mexico, last night and liberated Frank A. Howard, an American conductor on the Mexican Central Railway. Five days ago, Howard was arrested by the Mexican authorities because a jerk of his train had slightly injured one of the brakemen, a native. He was placed in prison, and while his friends were seeking to secure his trial by the slow and uncertain methods of the Mexican courts his pretty sweetheart was maturing a plan of her own for his release. Assisted by a tough-house employe, she forced the door of Howard's cell with a crowbar, and the American was liberated. He was told to board a train which was waiting for him a block away, and arrived here to-night. He says that the average American prefers liberty at any risk to risking his fate to Mexican laws.

WHAT TRUE FRIENDSHIP MEANS.
Between friends there must be close sympathy, and one must be able to give to the other what she lacks, but even between those friends who are nearest and dearest it is not necessary to lay bare one's heart. Such confidence is too apt to be greeted with a curious satisfaction, and even from a friend this gratification makes one feel as if one's bruises had been touched with vitriol. A real friend asks no questions. She takes the best that comes, the best that you care to offer her, and demands nothing more. She has long ago learned, being wise, that to all of us there comes a time when nothing should be said; it is true there is a time when something should be said, but there is never a time when everything should be said. There is very often a silence between two women friends that means rest, and she is unwise who breaks that silence.—Ruth Ashmore, in Ladies' Home Journal.

THE RACES ARE ON.
The annual spring meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club opened at the Woodbine yesterday and was favored by ideal weather, a splendid field of entries, and an attendance that left nothing to be wished for. The corteous and energetic secretary, Mr. Fraser, though rushed with work, had attended to all the details for the meet and everything was in fine shape, ensuring the comfort of the immense crowds that will be in attendance till the end of next week. This race meeting is the greatest sporting event in the Dominion and the management deserves credit for the standing attained from the modest beginning a quarter of a century ago.

There is a large number of entries for every race and the public can rely on seeing genuine sport, governed by the strictest rules of the track being honestly enforced.

SMOKER'S INSPIRATION.
A union cigar is a source of inspiration, upon which many of the most eloquent orators and able writers of modern times have been wont to rely while persons who, like Silas Wegg, have the habit of dropping in to verse, often attune their muse amid fragrant clouds of smoke. "That the Cigarettes' Union believe in the encouragement of budding genius, in the paths of poetry, is attested by the following eulogy upon Union Cigars:
Reclining at ease on a rich divan, He smokes a cigar, this contented man;
He thinks of days that were, and are Of the evils of smoking a scab cigar; Of health regained, of by-gone ills; Of doctors' calls, and doctors' pills; Of his robust health, and of the cure; Of smoking "Weeds" that are simply pure—
These are cigars with the UNION LABEL, Which should be on each smoker's table.
