Berlin, March 14.—The Prussian diet was engaged in a solemn debate this week over the adoption of another clause to the state lottery proposed by Finance Minister Von Rheinbaden, who explained the intricacies and matthematical proportions involved in Prussian great gambling institutions that yield the state something like $2,500,000 a year. All the speakers opposed lotteries on 'principal, but only one advocated the abolition of the state lottery. Lotteries have a definite place in the finance system of most of the German states, and the finance minister observed if Prussian swould spend just as much money on the lotteries of other states. It is estimated that the various states take in $13,500,000 in this way. Abundant Iterature is irrelated affirming that it is not only morally proper for a man to invest in the lottery, but it is his duty not to omit any chance to provide for his family.
