

THE STANDARD'S BASEBALL STORY FOR SEASON 1909 ANOTHER; DROPS ONE PLACE

HUGH JENNINGS, Manager of the Detroit Tigers.

Here we have "Hughie" Jennings, the sorrel-haired leader of the champion Detroit Tigers. Jennings is known to every baseball fan in the country and his "How yah!" is famous on every big league ground.

years in the short field, and with Herman Long was considered the best of his day. It was not until his arm went lame that the singularly player sought to first base.

Three years ago Detroit carried the great player, and he brought home the bacon the first time out. It is on the coaching line that he now stars, and with his "Bo Yah!" "Bo Yah!" referred to above and other shouts of encouragement to his men he keeps them on the jump throughout. His style of coaching is new to baseball. He is rarely set down by the umpire, for he is known that Jennings, with all his aggressiveness, is a clean player, who never resorts to a rowdy tactics.

Jennings is a great manager, a credit to the game, and deserves all the luck which has been his with the Detroit champions.

HEARD ON THE BLEACHERS. Napoleon Lajoie is the same graceful player as of old. He makes many works of plays that would be sensational if pulled off by anybody else.

Joe Kelley, who managed the Boston Nationals last year, and who is at present with Toronto, is in Boston and took in the Cleveland-Red Sox game yesterday. Kelley would make no comment whatever on the poor showing of the Deves, or on Bowerman's dejection.—Boston Post, June 12.

What would the Naps be without Larry Lajoie and his "biggie"? With the co-star combination of Young and Lajoie the Clevelanders look like the team that will be the contenders for the championship.

Frank Farrell is planning to enlarge his seating capacity at the New York Highland grounds.

The umpires in the National league are getting in from all sides this season. Under it there are any umpires living who can please the fans.

Pres. Ben Johnson and Charley Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox are now in the woods north of St. Paul on a fishing and hunting trip.

French, the Red Sox' second snicker, was taken out of the game on Friday last to be hurried to the bedside of his wife, who is dying in Ohio.

OLD COUNTRY CRICKET NOTES. R. L. Robinson, Oxford's Australian Rhodes Scholar and express bowler, is considered by many to be faster even than Brierley, Fielder, Knox or Cotter. He takes a comparatively short run, varied by a skip and jump, and gets his pace from his shoulders, i. e., what is called a slinging action.

American League. Boston, Mass., June 14.—Cleveland took its third straight game from Boston today, 3 to 1, errors being responsible for every run scored. Joss and Arellanes pitched strongly, the latter allowing but three hits. President John I. Taylor of the local club announced after the game that Chester L. Nourse, the Brown University pitcher, signed a contract with Boston today and will report to Manager Lake Thursday.
