

commences falling, follow it with the crosse. A rapid twist of the wrist will revolve the crosse from above to beneath the ball, which will thus be caught.

Catching is entirely a matter of practice, joined with natural aptitude.