the wounds which caused death. The wound on the back of the head about four inches in length, and was such as might have been made with an axe, and the witness would judge the blow might make such stain as that on axe No. 1, shown in court. He could not determine the nature of the instrument with which the throat had been cut, but there seemed to be two incisions. His judgment was that the blow on the head had been made first the victim having been felled to the floor of the woodhouse by the blow the body afterwards being dragged to the woodpile where it was found. His opinion was that the woman had been lead about forty-eight hours when discovered . The witness spoke of the blood stained overalls which had the appearance of having had something wiped on them. The doctor's evidence

Dr. Addy of St. John, bacteriologist gave evidence of having made a chemical test of the stains on axe No. 1, ap plying the test for blood, which wa own to be present. There were also witness said, smears of paint on the axe, which he judged to have been pu n after the blood. He also corroborated Dr. Murray's evidence in regard to the production of the blood stains and the nature of the wounds in relation to the causing of death.

human blood from that of an animal, the witness stated it was possible if the blood were fresh, but not if it had become fully dry. In the case of the blood on the axe in question it had become dry and there was no way of determining whether it was human blood. The witness said he had also exam ined axe known as No. 2, belonging t Mr. Mellen, a neighbor of Father Mc-Auley and found no blood. The wit ness was shown by Mr. McKeown, or cross-examination, the articles of wear ing apparel found in the valises carried by the prisoner. Good progress was made, a large number of witnesses being examined during the day. The attendance at the morning session was very small, but in the afternoon the galleries filled up, principally with ladies. Today's proceedings saw the production in court of the axes, the blood stained overalls and rug and the other articles that figured so largely at the preceding trial. Prof. Ardrews, the first witness this morning, gave the results of the tests he had made of the smear on axe No. 1 and the paint on the door of the priest's closet that had been broken open. A number of experiments were made, each confirmative of the other, in showing that the smear on the axe was paint and similar to that on the His honor asked the witness if he could state that the paint on the axe come from the implement being struck that it did not seem probable that the paint that had hardened for months on a door would make a smear on an axe by a blow of the latter. To this the witness stated that before he experimented that had also been his opinion, but after making mechanical tests in a practical way he found that a blow would produce such a result, making a smear showing similar characteristics to that on the axe in question. The witness very fully and explicitly explained the chemical tests to the jury, who asked many questions, In answer to a question of Hon.
