whom she almost never sees. The interest and happiness faces of the people might bring into her life the sunshine which beats vainly on the southern and eastern windows on these coasts.

And then there is Mrs. C. Mrs. C. is forty-five. Her one daughter, who married and came to live in a home of her own, a thousand miles away. So that window through which much of her life's sunshine came is of necessity darkened, and Mrs. C. is very homesick and thinks of these cheerful places but how many other windows Mrs. C. might cut through to make her heart home more cheerful. There is the clarity work of the poor of the town, in which her friends have helped to try to interest her. There is the Sunshine Society which she has been urged to join. There is the "crippled" lady across the way. There is Mrs. C.'s husband who, to tell the truth, seems to her to be decidedly an "uncle" window so far as she is concerned. I know that any of these interests would bring a flood of sunshine into Mrs. C.'s life, if she would but cut through some of these eastern and southern windows and let the blessed sunshine in.

Square Flipper Killed at Greenspond.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Mr. Editor.—Will you kindly give space in your valuable paper for this little article, for it is a singular thing, and only happens now and again, especially at Greenspond.

While out gunning this winter with three other men, we happened to come up with a very large seal, anyway we started to row for it, and was soon up within one hundred yards, more or less, then I gave orders to the other fellows in the punt to stop, and every man kept quiet and just as I was ready to fire the seal rose its head to go down, quick as a flash I had my sight and fired placing the bullet right in the head of the seal, we were soon up to the seal and captured it as we always do, by getting the seal into it, finding there was a little life into it, we gave it another bullet, so that it would be quite dead. We then found that it was too large to take into the punt so we had to tow it to the nearest land, after getting there we found an "uncle" window so far as she is concerned. I know that any of these interests would bring a flood of sunshine into Mrs. C.'s life, if she would but cut through some of these eastern and southern windows and let the blessed sunshine in.

Women in All Parts of Canada

TELL OF THE HEALTH DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS BRING.

They Made a New Woman of Mrs. Elie Amraut who was a Victim of Kidney Disease for over a Year.

Amraut's Hill, Yarmouth Co., N.S., Mar. 11. (Special).—Four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of me. Those are the words of Mrs. Elie Amraut of this place. They are words that have been used again and again by women in all parts of Canada who have suffered, and who have found relief and cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I suffered for over a year from kidney disease," Mrs. Amraut continues. "Nothing I tried helped me. At last some one told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Before I had finished the first box I felt better. Four boxes made a new woman of me."

No remedy ever given to the public has brought health and happiness into the lives of so many women as Dodd's Kidney Pills. This is because nine-tenths of the ills to which women are subject come from diseased kidneys. No woman who uses Dodd's Kidney Pills can have diseased kidneys. They always cure the kidneys.

The T. A. & B. Society held its quarterly meeting on Sunday afternoon. Twenty applicants, including three transfers from the Juvenile Branch, were elected. This large number of young men seeking admission to the Society points to a healthy sentiment prevailing throughout the city. The Society's financial statement was a very satisfactory one and met with universal approval. The Guardians of the Juveniles submitted their report of the working of the junior branch, which was creditable in every respect, particularly in the large number of our young boys who at every meeting present themselves to be enrolled under the banner of Father Matthew. The report, showing decided improvements in all its workings. Legislation of the great importance having its object the relieving of all members of forty years' standing from all fees, was deferred until next monthly meeting at the request of the mover. The Soiree Committee presented the Society with a very substantial amount, the result of the mammoth soiree held last month. An adjournment was taken at 6 o'clock.

The F.P.U.

Meeting.

HELD LAST NIGHT.

Although the city was enshrouded in darkness for two hours last night owing to the big fire, the F. P. U. meeting at the Fishermen's Institute was held, and largely attended. Two lamps were secured, which with the watchman's lantern, afforded light. At 9 p.m. when the electric lights were turned on, quite a number of members when they found no lights available, before the President arrived. The meeting was held in the hall, and was very much interested in the fire which this city beheld last evening. The President took the Chair, and the meeting at once entered into the consideration of the evening's demonstration and mass meeting. It was decided that the crews of Harvey's steamers should meet at the Fishermen's Institute by 7 p.m., and march up town, stopping at Job's Cove for a short time to permit the crews of the Nascope and Beothic to join in, then on to Grieve's to pick up the Erna's crew, and on to Bowring's where a short stop would be made. Tickets will be given each sealer in the parade during the march. Only ticket holders will be admitted as the accommodation is sufficient only for about 1000 men while there must be at least 2000 sealers in the city. The parade will turn up Walgrave St., proceed along Middle Street to Prospect Street, then on to Water Street and to the Institute Building. On Wednesday night another meeting for 1000 members will be held at the same building to continue the business which time did not permit them to finish last night. The meeting last night was extremely enthusiastic and on several occasions the speakers were cheered. Harvey & Co. and Crosbie & Co. were severely criticised by the meeting because of the manner in which the crews of their steamers have been treated since their arrival here, and of the non-observance of A. Harvey & Co. to carry out their agreement with the President respecting accommodation for their sealers. The President thanked the speakers and asked for three cheers for W. C. Job at Job's, and for Messrs. Bowring Bros. at Bowring's which were given with a vim. The cheers were intended as an appreciation by the men of the manner in which those firms carried out the Sealing Agreement made with the President. Without doubt the first P. U. meeting held at St. John's will long be remembered by the members who attended last night's meeting. Yesterday at Job's where the Diana was leaving for the north, quite a scene was presented by the attempt of the police to arrest one of the crew. A half dozen policemen were engaged in handcuffing the man, and a rope was fastened around his legs and the orders were given to the men to haul the prisoner ashore. The crew declined to do, and one of the plucky members of the F. P. U., said no, and asked for three cheers for Coaker, which was replied to so effectively as to be heard along the water front, and fearing trouble the police gave up the attempt and the man was left on the steamer. The man was fighting drunk. The crew interfered because of the rough manner in which the police handled the prisoner. The name of Coaker was sufficient yesterday to cause the police to hesitate. It will also be sufficient to bring to their senses the gang of grab all who now despise the requests of 5000 men for clean government and laws beneficial to the common folk of our country. When the crosses are marked at the next election, the name of Coaker will carry sufficient weight to upset the calculations of the worst party that ever ruled the Colony. The Government has decided to hold a Sealers' meeting in the British Hall to-morrow night. Coaker's meeting to-night will be an historic one as it is an assertion of the fact that the fishermen of the Colony intend to do their own thinking and ruling. What a change! It is indeed something the fishermen should be proud of.

Tim Shannahan on the Wooden Sealing Ships

AND THE MEN OF DAYS GONE BY.

Tucker and Delaney stood on the King's Wharf and watched the Kite steam down the harbor, making her way through the ice slowly. The new style fleet, the ironclads, lay at the piers and sounded their sirens as she passed by, and Tucker couldn't help remarking who a great difference there was between them and the little Kite. Delaney's thoughts struggled back to the days of old, when the wooden steamers were the only kind that prosecuted the voyage, and we looked upon the Neptune and Aurora, the Ranger and the Diana as jewels of the fleet. How quickly we change in our views and how suddenly we grasp the new order of things, and look upon the old and feel outlived and ask ourselves how on earth did the men of long ago perform such wonderful work with the feeble means at their disposal?

But it is good that we still have the little Kite and such ships in the swim, for they serve to prove the great strides that the Kite is making to-day and also link the past history of our sealing voyage with the present. Looking at the Kite steaming out, Delaney's thoughts went back to the time when sailing vessels were in vogue, and he couldn't help remarking to Tucker that it would be difficult proposition to man sailing vessels to-day.

Tucker shook his head and said he supposed it would, but at the same time, says he, how is it that we could bring in twice as many seals in those days as they now manage to scrape up with all their latest improvements? I'd like, said Tucker, for some of our brainy lecturers to give us their ideas on this matter. Are the seals diminishing in numbers or is it that they are missed each year? This subject, says Tucker, would make a good debate in our clubs, and would certainly be a great deal more interesting than talking on foreign subjects that we know little or nothing about.

Just then the Kite stopped steaming and a big, long fellow with a slewed neck said, "Oh, be jabbers, she's stuck already." But he was one of those "know-it-alls" that always stops on shore and pans them by the bogie. Twenty stowaways were found hiding down below and the Kite was slowed down to land them. Twenty stowaways! This in itself, says Tucker, clearly proves that the rising of the Kite is not going to last long, taste for the sea; 'tis in our nature. Yes, said Delaney, the nature of the beast. Soon the Kite will be straightened up for the Gulf, and we all silently wished Captain Carroll and his crew a bumper trip and a quick return.

You can't help noticing what little interest is taken by the everyday man of St. John's in the sealing voyage up to the first of March, but as soon as the first sound of a sealer's whistle strikes our ears and we see the crews hustling along, the old-time spirit is revived and we stroll down to have a look at them. And as we gaze on the ironclads, we admire them and can't help feeling a certain "respect" for them; but as for true, genuine love, well, we reserve all that for the wooden steamers, because that's the way we feel about the crews of the days gone by. When we look at the Neptune, who can forget the gallant Capt. Sam Blandford? He lives in our memory, and he is on the bridge steaming in with 42,000.

Who can look at the Eagle without thinking of Capt. William Jackman, the "hero of Labrador," arriving on St. Patrick's Day with a load of prime young harps. And again, who can look at the Aurora or the Eagle without feeling a sadness that Capt. Arthur Jackman was not spared to tread the bridge of one of the new built steamers. Our heart is stirred to its roots, and we hear again the loud and joyful cheers as we heard them on the glorious Easter morning when Capt. Arthur arrived with a load, after being reported as being lost with all hands.

Glancing at the Ranger we think of that great sealer who now goes to that land "from whence no traveller returns"—the great Captain Barbour; and again we see in fancy the Ranger sailing in with all her flags flying, as was her custom, when he stood on the bridge, and so on right down to the present day. It is very interesting to think of the old times; and now that we began this subject with the Kite, it is only fitting that we should end it by referring to Capt. Wm. Kneecap—Capt. "Bilby" as he was called by his crew. Many's the good load of fat he was shipmates with in the little Kite, and is very questionable if the captains that command the big ironclads of to-day feel any prouder than gallant Captain Kneecap did when he trod the bridge of the Kite and ordered the lines to be hove ashore as the Kite steamed into Bowring's wharf with a log load of prime young harps.

Let us all hope that the voyage of 1912 will be a prosperous one. Mrs. Tucker takes this opportunity to inform the captain of the first steamer in that she is very fond of flippers and hopes that he won't forget to leave a good supply "and" with any of the policemen for her, and if the policemen don't take them because she didn't succeed in getting a raise in pay for them, he can leave them with Tom Carew of the Telegram, for he's sure to be over, if the day of general judgment doesn't arrive in the meantime.

THE DOCTOR.

The doctor is an experiment station situated midway between this world and the life beyond. Not all doctors look alike, but all they all charge alike. The Kite-haired Koreans. A few years ago some of the Kite-haired Koreans discovered that there is an appendix to the human body and immediately invented a new disease, which has become highly popular with people who don't know an appendix from a glossary. This operation is a very simple one and can be performed while you wait, unless you have forgotten your check-book. The doctor is one of the most learned men in the community and rarely confounds the professional terms, "maternal media" and "e pluribus unum." The doctor never gets that is coming to him in this world and that is one reason why the profession is so crowded. Nobody pays a doctor's bill until he is led up to it by the deputy sheriff, and the result is that every physician has a collection of mildewed promissory notes and judgments that he couldn't cash in for a lap robe. Many a doctor has made a thirty-mile drive on a winter night, only to discover the next day that his patient was several years in arrears at the shooting gallery. The doctor is the only man in the community whose accounts are collected by a kind and merciful providence. If it were not for the human tongue the doctor wouldn't know what to do with his surplus pills. As it is, he can take one feeing glance at the complexion of the tongue and tell him immediately whether the patient is troubled with bunions or is trying to collect a little loose change in the form of accident insurance.

Caught Looting. Seriously Injured

At the early stage of the Collins fire last night a tipsy sealer, belonging to Port Rexton, was caught looting. He treated himself to some dry goods that had slightly suffered from the fire, and was making away with it when captured by Constable Farley, who conveyed him to the police station. The sealer told the police that he was wrongfully treated as he had as much right to the goods as the fire did.

A serious accident occurred yesterday while the S.S. Diana was going through the Heads. One of the crew, Richard Hutchings, of Whitbourne, accidentally fell over the bow of the ship on the ice. The injured man was hauled on board by the aid of a rope in an unconscious condition and afterwards landed at Port Amherst where he awaited the arrival of the ambulance in which he was conveyed to the General Hospital. Hutchings had his right leg broken near the ankle and received serious bodily injury.
