"And was it paid the others."

been known to be late for his work. A more methodical, careful man never hung over a ledger or balanced a cash-book.

At length he reached the well-known staircase, opened the office door, and stood still for a moment in surprise. Young Carter, the assistant bookkeeper, was there before him, already at his work. Mr. Orump amiled origin.

Annie, with whom Robert Carter had fallen very much in love. It was early on the preceding evening that things had come to a crists, and, semewhat to the young man surprise, Mr Crump had rejected the proposed stageoment. He did not like young Carter. He didnot approve of the young fellow's fashionably out collars, ner of his coart-pin, nor of his cane. Such things Mr. Crump considered were the signs of a frivolous disposition and unsteady habits. Nor did Mr. Crump approve of the matches of comic sengs which Carter was continually humming. He suspected that the young man frequented music halls, and spent more money on cheap cigare, novels, and outling than was proper for one in his position, Besides, Mr. Robert Carter was neather than was proper for one in his position, Besides, Mr. Robert Carter was unsulfy the last of all the derks to make his appearance in the morning, and this was, in Mr. Crump's eyes, a very bad sign. It was plain to the old man that Carter was now making as attempts to earn his good ophies.

"This will show—time will show," said Mr. Crump is rest, and soft ophies.

"This will show—time will show," said Mr. Crump is rest, and soft ophies.

"This will show—time will show," said Mr. Crump is rest, and soft spent to extra began to arrive, and then came Mr. Mason, the acting parture, a tall, pale man, with long black while hank book and see lew things were going on. Mr. Mason opened the leating, and soft spent to the differ twice a week, to are similar the bank book and see lew things were going on. Mr. Mason opened the leating, and soft spent to the differ the proper in the first mode a list of the payments he had to make and then wont be his safe for his checkbeek. As he opened it to write the first check he was surprised to find that the counterfoil belonging to the last sheak which had been taken from the stage of the first check he was surprised to find that the counterfoil belonging to the last sheak which had head taken from the stage of the stage of the search and the other evening that ments he had to make and then went to his safe for his checkbook. As he opened it to write the first check he was surprised to find that the counterfoil belonging to the last check which had been taken from the book was not filled up. He could hardly believe his eyes. Never in all his life had he written a check without first filling up the counterfoil with particulars of the amount, the date and the person to whom the check was sent. But his surprise changed to dismay when he took out his cashbook and found that he had only drawn nine checks the day before, the counterfoils of which were all properly filled up, where as a tenth check had been torn out of the book.

For a moment he sat as if stunned. Could anyone have stelen the blank check? He always kept the key of his safe on his book.

For a moment be nat as if stumed, could sayou have atolest the ball of the large and many countries. The always kept the key of his sate on his some one unight have got lold of the key, taken an impression of his ways, and heard of and his part of the heard of the heard Crump.

"Do what !" cohoed his employer with a contemptuous smile. "Who did you get to do this little bit of work for you?"

As he spoke Mr. Livesey tossed a check across the table. Mr. Crump took it up and read: "The London & Lancashire bank. Pay Joseph Beckman, e.q., or order, three thousand one hundred and seventy-two pounds fifteen shillings. Livesey & Mason."

Livesey.
"I don't know sir."
"You don't know? Yov see that the check has come from your book?"
"Yes, sir,"

"Did you give it to anyone?"
"No, sir."
"Did you mise it?" "No, sir."

"Did you mise it?"

"Yes, sir, I missed it yesterday, and I wrote to Messrs. Marshall, to whom I had sent the one before that, thinking that I had torn out two by mistake."

"That rather points to his innocence."

amilal grimly.

"So you've made a beginning, young man," he said. "Well, we'll see,"

Carter's fees flushed a little as he bade for the older man good morning. The fact was that Crump, who had married rather late in life, had a bright-eyed daughter named Annie, with whom Robert Carter had fallen very much in love. It was only on she preceding avening that things had come to deson."

He looked up bewildered. The tall man a the frock coat watched him narrowly,
"Who is this Beckman?" asked Mr.

resy, the manager of the London & Lancashire bank, at which the firm kept thair account.

Then Mr. Jeffreys left, and came back accompanied by one of his cashiers. Then a bell was rung and Mr. Crump was sent for.

With a beating heart and a cold sweat on his brow the cashier obeyed the summons.

Bring your check-book, Mr. Crump, and the senior partner.

This was done, and a tail man, whom Mr. Crump had not noticed up to that time, stepped up to the table and glanced at the check-book along with Mr. Liveney.

"I thought so," exclaimed the old gentleman. "Here's the place from which the check was taken. Here is the centerfoll. The numbers correspond. What made you do it, Crump? You are the last man in the world from whom I would have expected and contemptucus smile. "Whe did you get to the little bit of work for you?"
