THE CANADA LIFE THE ONLARIO

PARTMENT OF INLAND REVENUE.

OTTAWA, MARCH 31ST, 1887.

JUSTINES THE BUILD COMPANIED

CAPE RUNTON HAILWAY.
Sec. Strait of Canso to Grand Narro

The Canada Life has lately published statements, attractively advertised, claiming to show "Surpassing Advantages of the Canada Life" over those of The Outario Mutual.

The comparisons given are unfair towards the younger company and misleading to the public. The years of comparison are from the 34th to the 40th years of the Canada's business against the 11th to the 16th of the Ontario's. The Canada Life had 23 years' business on its books at the time the Ontario issued its first policy. Surely the Canada Life does not expect the public to accept such a comparison as just and fair, or to give experienced and careful officers much credit for compiling and publishing such deceptive comparisons.

uninvested and unproductive assets is much less than in the older company the ratio of
The age of a Company has also a great deal to do with the ratio of expense to income, being much in favor of the older company, which has a large income from old business, which costs little to collect, and large interest income which costs little or nothing—while in the younger company the expense of establishment is heavy, and the ratio of its new business to its old is comparatively high.

While The Canada claims these advantages and is justly entitled to them, it should not in honor to itself, in justice to its rival, and in duty to the public, have published the unjust comparisons referred to.

Notwithstanding these advantages claimed by and due to The Canada, The Ontario Mutual, since the first two years of tis existence, has, without any stock capital whatever, established its business and given to its policyholders assurance at less cost than The Canada has to its policyholders, notwithstanding its initiatory expenses had been incurred and paid many years before, which, after all special pleading is laid aside, is what most concerns the engagements as that of The Canada.

In future notices we will show the difference in the cash cost of assurance in the two companies, and show at least some of the reasons why The Canada Life has not done so well for its policyholders as The Ontario has for its members, and we trust that the public will fellow us through our expositions.
