Mr. Ross could find no apology for that class who spenk disparagingly of Canada and her destiny. The development of the Dominion seemed assured, as it had all the material elements which go to build up a country. Interesting and carefully prepared statistics were given relating to Canada's territory; larger by 55,000 square miles than the United States, 30 times greater than the combined area of dense Britain and Irviand, and within 15,000 square miles of the area of all Europe.
