

brought up in the orphanage of Worcester, Mass. In 1896 he came with his brother, Arthur, to the Juniorate at Ottawa, whence he entered the Oblate Novitiate at Lachine, taking the habit Aug. 1, 1902. Here pulmonary disease, so fatal to the other members of his family, declared itself; and after an illness of several months he passed peacefully away Jan. 17, 1904. He had the happiness of pronouncing his final vows in articulo mortis.

His loss is the more keenly felt as he was a young man of unusual talent and promise, with a spirit joyous and elastic to the last. He leaves a brother, A. Labonté, O.M.I., the sole surviving member of the family, who is completing his theological studies in the North West. For him, as well as for the numerous friends of the deceased, THE REVIEW wishes to express its heartfelt sympathy.

HOCKEY.

On Friday, Feb. 26th, the College Hockey team travelled to Hawkesbury to play an exhibition match with the fast seven of that thriving town. Though the Collegians hoped to give their opponents a hard run, not even their most ardent supporters expected them to defeat the experienced representatives from the Lower Ottawa. So when College left the ice victors by a score of 3 goals to 1 there was great joy in the 'Varsity camp. For College, Lamothe in goal, played a remarkably strong game, stopping every shot that came his way; and it was only by the greatest luck that Hawkesbury tallied a single point. Brennan and Collin played a strong defense, the former performing some stunts that struck the eye of both opponents and spectators in a most forcible manner. Bawlf at centre and Capt. Ebbs as rover played and skated their covers off their feet. Halligan held down right wing with all the ability of an experienced player, whilst Cosgrove performed equally well at left wing. The best of feeling prevailed throughout the game, and College are already looking forward to the day when they can revisit Hawkesbury.
