

and the prestige of the school must soon suffer, if it has not already suffered, from this deficiency. I might go on to point out other and pressing needs connected with our Faculty, such as some provision for the early extension of our present buildings, and more particularly the early restoration to our endowment funds of the amount necessarily borrowed from them in 1885 for the same purpose ; but I fear I have already dwelt too long on the depressing subject of our wants and wishes. It is not for me to say how these wants are to be supplied. I feel that I may safely leave that to those true friends of progress who have always come to the relief of our University in its pressing needs, but I should be remiss in my duty if I failed to point out that they are real and pressing wants, and that we ask them to be supplied not to enrich ourselves, but to strengthen an institution which has done good service in the past, and which hopes to do still better service in the future in the interests not only of the University of which it forms a part, but of the profession with which it is connected and the cause of suffering humanity wherever it may be found.
