

GANEY VERBALLY THRASHES THOSE WHO CONDEMN HIM

In Reply to Whig's Attack Points to the Disappearance of Old Antagonists.

Before the orders of the day were called in the legislature yesterday, Mr. Ganev rose to a question of privilege, and referred to an attack on himself, which appeared in The Kingston Whig on the day the members of the house visited Kingston on the invitation of Mr. Pense, owner of the paper. He was offended, he asserted, because he regarded the invitation extended by the Kingston member as directed to himself. The article, he thought, had been deliberately published by Mr. Pense, an article that would have a strong attack if it had been written by a Liberal outside of the house. He was always ready to defend himself, and he had been prepared to meet the attack, but he thought the day for him to be on his defence in this celebrated case had passed because for two years he had been prepared to meet the attack, and he was now in a position to meet it on his own terms. A magnificent verdict had been given by the people in his favor, and he was proud to have received a majority of 120 in the House of Commons. He was now in a position to meet the attack on his own terms, and he was proud to have received a majority of 120 in the House of Commons.

Dropped Out of Sight.
Where, he asked, were the men on the other side of the house who tried to ruin him? The member against whom he brought his charges was out of public life, and the constituency he represented, West Pelee, which gave Mr. Stratton a majority of 120 in 1902, returned a Conservative in 1905 by 1200 majority. Mr. Ganev, on the other hand, had increased his majority from 300 in 1902 to 500 in 1905, and in the Town of Gore Bay, where Mr. Ganev lives, and where the Liberal candidate was only eleven votes behind in 1902, the Liberal candidate received only thirty-five votes out of a total of 175 in the election of 1905.

The methods pursued from 1902 to 1905 were not Ganev's, but those of the Liberal party, which had attempted to destroy him, and if the Liberals wished to continue the attack he was prepared to meet them on the question. Those Liberal leaders were all gone from the sphere of politics because of their methods. Look around and see the political wrecks, advised Mr. Ganev. Mr. Ross had gone to the senate, and could not stay in politics because of his methods. Gibeau, Latchford and Ewert, too, were gone, and the Liberal party, which had attempted to destroy him, was now in a position to meet the attack on his own terms.

He challenged anyone to point to anything in his life prior to his mixing with the Liberal party, that was against him. For the member for Kingston to descend to inviting him to Kingston, and then using his paper to attack him, was a disgrace to the Liberal party.

Mr. Ganev regretted nothing; he was a man who never decided that he took the right course, but looking back, if he had it to do over again he would make a good deal better job of it. He could discuss the lives of some of the men on the Liberal side, but would not unless provoked to it.

It was false, absolutely false, that the Conservative party had disowned him. He was perfectly satisfied with his position in the Conservative party. Why did not Mr. Pense turn his attention to the member for Monck if he wanted to find fault? He (Pense) might tell something about the Ontario Bank, whose bills were paid to Ganev for his support, and whose manager was able to switch a million and a half if he (Ganev) wished to tell something about the morals of some of the Liberal members of the House of Commons.

Mr. Ganev wondered what the principal of the School of Mines thought of Mr. Pense's attack. If this scurrilous attack was endorsed by the principal of the school, Mr. Ganev did not intend to endorse any further grants to the school.

If the attack had been made by someone not in the legislature, Mr. Ganev would not have taken it so seriously. But the attack was made by a member of the legislature, and he was determined to meet it on his own terms.

Not Guilty.
Mr. Pense replied. He thought Mr. Ganev had to a large extent ignored the privilege of the house, but he did not regret that the matter had been brought up. It had been charged that he deliberately caused to be published this article, and had acted from the principle in placing copies of the paper on the seats in the rain room, the members of the house. Mr. Pense was made uncomfortable by political controversy. He had never heard of the line in his paper about Mr. Ganev; he

CURES DRUNKARDS

Mary's Miracle.

The day of working miracles. I'm sure is far from past. And now to show you what I mean. I'll tell you of the last Great one that happened right to me.

For I was part of it, you see. You know the life I used to lead—O God, a living death. A drunkard of the hopeless kind—For, scarce a sober breath I ever drew, and hope and pride Were lost to me and nearly all beside.

One friend alone was left—my wife. God bless her every hour! She saved me from a drunkard's grave, And whiskey's wicked power. Just how she saved me you shall see. This is the way she told it me. When hope was almost dead within Her faithful, constant breast, She read of Dr. Haines' Cure. Then without stay or rest, She sent for one Trial Sample free. And gave it unbeknown to me! I drank of it at every meal— I ate it in my bread. While Mary watched me anxiously, And what this treatment did for me. Until one day I stopped to think, That I had lost my love for drink! When, quite unconscious I was cured, My Mary told me all. It seemed the very act of God, A modern miracle. I call it this, because my wife And Haines' Cure had saved my life.

And now my little story's done, My every word is true. For every cure that I read of for me, The same 'twill do for you; And wives and mothers—one and all.

You will also get books and testimonials to prove how hundreds have been saved.

had never in his campaigns mentioned Mr. Ganev's name; he had never planned anything about him, and knew nothing of the article complained of until his attention was called to the matter in the house a few days ago. He hoped those who had applauded Mr. Ganev would believe that he would not deliberately offend that member. If he had known of the existence of the article he would have destroyed the type before allowing it to appear. As to the distribution of copies on the train, that was a mistake, and he was sorry it had been done. He was not a member of the house, and he was not a member of the legislature.

The resolution was introduced by Preston, who was a member of the Ontario legislature, and who was a member of the National Child Labor Committee of the United States. Mr. Preston asked for compulsory education for every child up to 14 or 15 years of age, up to which time child should be prevented attending school, and by moving: "That in the opinion of this committee every child has a right to health and education, and that the government should be responsible for the health and education of every child in the province."

CONSERVE FUEL RESOURCES FOR BENEFIT OF THE NATION
President Roosevelt Addresses Congress on the Urgent Need of Prompt Action.

Washington, Feb. 12. — President Roosevelt to-day sent to both houses of congress a long message calling attention to what he terms the "urgent need of legislation affecting the different phases of the public land situation in the United States."

He advocates the conservation of coal and other fuel resources on lands still belonging to the government, saying that henceforth the nation should retain its title to its fuel resources; urges government control of the western public land pastures, with a system of small grazing fees, etc., and asks for an appropriation of half a million dollars, immediately available, in addition to present estimates, to aid in detecting and preventing land frauds.

The president points out that it would have been better if some of the eastern lands had been reserved for government control, and suggests provision for the sale of public lands in the west against recurrence of the conditions which have developed in the 2300 cases of public land entries in four districts mentioned, and says non-compliance with the law was found in various cases. He also mentions the fact that the government has a large area of public land in the west, and that it is necessary to have a system of control over these lands.

Mr. Currie—Order of the house for a return of copies of all correspondence between the government and any member of the public, or any other person or persons in reference to the proposed bill to amend the County of Prince Edward.

The budget for 1907 provides for the expenditure of $305,000,000, $60,000,000 more than last year, and is twice as much as was required to cover all expenses prior to the Russo-Japanese war, and military increases and new undertakings in the department of communications are to be met by an internal loan of $15,000,000.

AMBUK PREVENTS AMPUTATION OF A PROMINENT ODD-FELLOWS' FINGER

Mr. Wm C. Edwards, P.D.C.R.A.O.F., P.G.M.I.O.O.F., and P.P.O.A. Shepherd, one of the most widely known men in Friendly Society circles it is possible to meet, had the following sensational experience. Interviewed at his home in Peter St., Toronto, he said: "In January of last year I cut the middle finger of my left hand severely, and blood poisoning set in. The wound was so very painful that I could not use the whole hand, which began to swell and inflame. I consulted one of the leading doctors of Toronto, and for two months I was under his care. The wound got no better, and, one day the doctor said, 'Edwards, the only thing I can do with this finger is to take it off. It can never be cured.' This was not very pleasant news, and at that time the agony from the wound was terrible and the swelling and inflammation extended right up the arm. I went to see another doctor, and wander about for some weeks. He then told me that all he could do for me would be to cut open the whole finger and scrape the bone which, he said, had become diseased through the blood poisoning. I went away to think when I would have the operation and met a friend, who, hearing the details, said 'Try Ambuk before you have it taken off.' I did so. I bathed the wound and applied some of the ointment, and that night I got a little sleep. Next morning the wound began to bleed, whereas, before it had only discharged pus. That was a good sign, so I went on with the Ambuk. It seemed to soothe it and draw the soreness completely away. Within a few days I could do away with the sling which I had carried the hand, and in a few weeks time there was not a trace of the wound to be seen. To-day my finger is as good as a bell, whereas, had I not tried Ambuk, I should have been a cripple. I paid over $20 in doctors' fees, and when I think of the trifling cost of Ambuk, I am amazed at its wonderful value. My experience should help other sufferers, so I do not mind stating the facts."

A more sensational proof of the value of Ambuk has rarely been reported and its lesson to sufferers from skin injuries and diseases is very clear.
