Cotton Gossip. Cotton Gossip. Marshall, Spader & Co. wired J. G. Reat, King Edward Hotel, at the close of the market to-day : Early cables indicated that Liverpool traders were at least prepared for some steadiness in the market. Indeed, all along they have resisted declines in the option list, tho without furnishing an incentive in spot transactions. To-day the decline in spots abroad of only 4 points and a 6-point loss over night up to our opening might have a better effect on this side had our short interest of two weeks ago been in ex-istence.

ence. t was to be, and the May option sold hin 20 points of March 18, and July need a better tone at 13 cents. Stop ers were not reached, and conservatism valled long enough to allow the trade be evened up at some substantial gain t this level.

o be evened up at some substantial gain wer this level. Fifteen points advance was secured, more m account of the timidity of those usu-lly working for a depression than by eason of really improved conditions in the reneral market. Of course, at to-day's low evel, we have a different technical cou-lition and a possible working basis for ionsumers. The rest depends again on sup-ply and demand. The weather map was clear to-day almost infirely, and temperatures are improving. The temperatures are still much too low for germination and growth. We are not fisposed to give undue weight to crop con-lition as a market influence at this time. We find it difficult to believe, even with the proofs before us, the ease with which he cotton world has accommodated itself to i 10-milion-bale crop. It results from a reduced trade demand, with a falling off in the world's business in all directions, und with available supplies of cotton so nearly equal to last year and a demand so much curtailed, we believe speculation will so powerless to handle the market success-fully. Meantime, at lower levels, there may be some temporary safety in purchases.
