ISH PREMIER BLAMES U.S.

Lloyd George Blames United States For Fostering Idea of People Deciding Their Own Future — Labor Party Chairman Opposes Bill-Offers Alternative Proposals.

t gloves by Premier Lloyd George and Sir Edward Carson, the ster Unionist leader, in the debate today in the House of Combas on the second reading of the Irish bill. The premier said was action such as that taken by the United States Senate in opting the Irish resolution that had fostered secession.

secession, not self-government.

Mr. Lloyd George said he wanted to say to "our American friends" that Eamonn De Valera was putting forward the same claims in exactly the same language as Jefferson Davis, and that some of the men who voted for the Irish self-determination motion in the Senate the other day had ancestors LONDON, March 21.—The United States was handled with- secession, not self-government.

"De Valera is putting forth the same views in the same words hat Jefferson Davis used," the premier declared, and added that uch a movement had led to civil war.

"We are doing nothing more than the Light of States o

"We are doing nothing more than the United States claimed

"We are doing nothing more than the United States claimed r themselves," he continued, "and will stand no less."

Sir Edward Carson, in opening the debate, said he believed at the Irish murders were committed "not by my countrymen, it by ill-conditioned Americans," misled by Sinn Fein propated and, which, he exclaimed, pointing to the Government, "you and which, he exclaimed, pointing to the Government, "you be doing nothing to counteract."

Would Never Come.

The acceptance of that demand, declared the premier, would never come. The was a demand, which if persisted in he said, would lead to exactly the same measures of repression as in the case of the House. Framed by Republican members of the foreign affairs committee and backed by party leaders, the measure was thrown into the hopper with as the claimed, for themselves. Great Britain, he added, would stand on its bridge bill, but instantly there developed a demand for speedy action. A move anda, which, he exclaimed, pointing to the Government, "you re doing nothing to counteract.'

Premier Lloyd George insisted there was no use of talking bout self-determination, since those who supported it must go the full length of granting an Irish republic.

Set Up Republic.

There were certain powers which might be conferred upon Ireland when she settled down to an established window, said the premier, but if they were given at the present but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the United Kingdom, said the premier, but if they were given at th on of any principle; otherwise it might be carried to every Alternative Proposals.

William C. Addison, chairman of the Labor party in the House, on behalf of that party, put forward two alternative proposals for dealing with the Irish question, which he said would be satisfactory to the Irish people. The first provided for the granting of a full measure of dominion self-government with a provision for the protection of minorities, the questions of defence and foreign relations to be reserved for the Imperial Parliament. The second provided that a form of self-government should be decided upon by an Irish constituent assembly, representing the whole Irish people, and elected on a system of proportional representation, which would be charged with the task of drafting a new constitution with a provision for the protection of minorities and reservation of the questions of defence and foreign relations to the Imperial Parliament.

becomes elective? Count and the followers to get their rifles to maintain our position in the six Uister counties, when this bill gives us the right to control those counties?"

He declared that Mr. Asquith, by his proposals for amending the 1914 measure "killed his own child," which was so distasteful to Ulster. He promised that Ulster would do the best it could under the two-parliament plan.

Premier Lloyd George also attacked the Asquith plan, saying that it was leading to the proclamation of an Irish republic and secession.

William Adamson, Labor leader, said he was opposed to the bill and that his followers had adhered to his decision in a vote, but he did not outline any definite plan for a solution. He stated his personal views, which he said, should not be confused with the view of his party, as he had not placed them before the leaders of labor. He was for one Parliament with full powers for everything, except defence and foreign affairs, and for immediately cailing a constituent assembly.

Admits Not Acceptable.

Mr. Lloyd George said he did not maintain that the bill would be immediately acceptable to Ireland, or that there could be evolved any scheme sanctioned by any party in the United Kingdom which would suit the Irish when launched.

The premier declared it was the Government's business to prepare a bill which it believed to be the nearest approach to a solution of the situation with the hope that it would be accepted by Ireland by slow stages. He pointed out that it could not be expected that 120 years of unrest could be settled in a year or two.

The day brought out little new in the debates on the Irish question. Sir Edward Carson declared during his Admits Not Acceptable. the debates on the Irish question. SEES WIDER FREEDOM.

LONDON, April 1.— The London Times in an editorial today considers that "the very substantial" majority secured by the Government on the second reading of the home rule bill gives it "wider freedom" to frame and pursue in accordance with high principles of great measure of constitutional iple a great measure of constitutional ciple a great measure of constitutional reform.

"In the present form," the editorial continues, "the bill is far from an equitable settlement, and it will require more cogent evidence than the parliamentary division list to persuade the Irish people to the contrary. Nevertheless, we hold that it is within the power of Parliament vastly to improve it. Now that Ulster has given her grudging consent, there remains to be fulfilled the paramount duty of securing for the Nationalists of Ireland a measure which will at least be a fair instalment on their hopes."

POST CARD RECEIVED 12 YEARS AFTER MAILING

One of "Little" Girls in Message To Be Married Soon.

DETROIT, March 31.—Mrs. Clarence W. Moore of 876 Trumbull avenue received a postcard this afternoon from a girl friend. Miss Loule Robinson, of Goodwood, Ont, twelve years after the latter was mailed.

"Your mother and her two little girls are coming to Detroit to visit," the message ran. "I hope you get this card in time to meet them. Bessie and Helen have the whooping cough."
Then Mrs. Moore noticed the malling date shown by the Canadian postmark. She took the card and read it again. then looked at the postmark. It was dated "Port Hope, Toronto Division, March 3, 1908."
The card had been addressed to Mrs. Moore just after her marriage. One of the little girls mentioned in the message is to be married soon.

The card was in as good condition as if it had been mailed the day before. Where had it lain these twelve years?
