POLICY, NOT PATRONAGE, WINS POLITICAL SUCCESS

Kelly-Evans, Addressing Smith's Falls Conservatives, Refers to Present Unrest at Ottawa.

SMITH'S FALLS, April 6.—(Special.)—A largely attended public meeting, held under the auspices of the Smith's Falls Conservative Association, took place this evening to hear an address by Kelly-Evans of Toronto, on "What the Rideau Lake System Means to the People of the Province."

Mr. Evans dwelt upon the possibilities of the tourist traffic drawn by the excellent fishing on the Rideau Lake System, and pointed out that the waters, owing to the large amount of stumps and snags therein, are the most dangerous of the province, and that this sport had rapidly increased in popularity to the number of sportsmen in the State.

He gave statistics to prove the great sums of money now coming into the province each year, brought by persons attracted by fishing and shooting, and maintained that the towns and villages along the Rideau Lake System, by taking a proper interest in the question of adequate protection, might attract large sums of money to them.

The difference in Ontario.

He touched upon the apparent unrest existing in the Conservative party at Ottawa, while there seemed to be the slightest unrest as far as provincial affairs were concerned, stating that, in his opinion, the cause of the difference was not entirely that the party was in opposition at Ottawa, and in power at Toronto, but that the administration of Sir James Whitney had been full of strong, virile and active policies and reforms, and that not one whisper of graft had been heard, while the opposition at Ottawa seemed almost too engrossed in criticizing the graft and corruption alleged to exist in the Liberal administration.

He held that the Conservative party was in great need of the creation of a firm, sound platform, sufficiently strong to attract and enthrall the members of its own party, and to convince wavering voters on the other side, and that the party had been too long without a branch of the great conservation policy, and suggested, if the arguments he had given were sound, that the association at Smith's Falls might adopt this plank, at any rate for their own locality.

The conservation policy had arrived on the continent, and one of the great political parties, and must eventually adopt it, in Canada, and time by the Conservative party took for its very own, he believed it would make the main plank in an attractive platform. He closed as follows:

"I have been accused of having not taken sufficient interest in party politics, and possibly I am guilty of this neglect, but my observations have led me to believe that many associations

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER OF COMRADE PROSPECTOR

Crown's Theory is That Walter Ross Killed Chum For Money—Self-Defence is His Plea.

NORTH BAY, April 6.—(Special.)—Walter Ross was placed on trial this morning for the murder of Percy Parkinson at Ramore, Dec. 9 last. The prisoner being without funds, T. W. McGarry, assisted by G. L. T. Bull, was assigned to defend him. The case is not yet concluded. Many tiffs between the counsel, Messrs. Blackstock and McGarry, gave the case added interest to-day, as the defence is fighting every inch of the measure in a certain course of conduct. A. T. Rowell, provincial constable at Matheson, told the story of the tragedy, as told by Walter Ross, the latter being the quiet, non-committal man of slight physique. Both were living in a shack near Ramore, a flag station on the T. and N. O. Ry., 135 miles north of North Bay, engaged in prospecting.

Ross story was that the men had words that morning over mining claims in which both were interested, culminating in an altercation, when Parkinson advanced toward him with uplifted ax, and saying, "Damn you, I will fix you."

Parkinson advanced, despite Ross' demand for him to stop, and, having his rifle in his hand, he shot him. According to Ross, the shot was fired between nine and ten, on the morning of the ninth of December last.

Constable Rowell visited the shack, making careful examination and measurements, and his evidence tended to show that Ross' story was peculiar. The seat of an overturned chair, near the entrance door, was covered with blood, a bullet was found embedded in the wall at a height of only two feet and nine inches from the floor; and a bullet had entered Parkinson's head, behind the right ear, striking an upward course and emerging from the left eye, tearing part of face off.

Nine days before the shooting, Parkinson received $75, and had spent very little of this. The last heard of Parkinson alive was on the morning of Dec. 8, and that Ross went to the house of Mr. and Mrs. Richards, and, in the absence of Richards, and despite the protests of Mrs. Richards, stayed the night. Previous to this, Ross had trouble with the Richards, and had been fined $25 and bound over to keep the peace and stay away from the house of Mr. and Mrs. Richards, and gave the children a present of two dollars. The woman was afraid of him, and he carried his rifle and begged him to leave, but he persisted in remaining, saying that Parkinson was away, and that there was no wood in the house.

Evidence will be introduced by the crown tending to show that the shooting took place the day after Parkinson was last seen. No money was found on Parkinson's body, and the constable swears that one pocket was turned inside out.

ARREST LONDON SUSPECT ON CLUE OF LOST HAT

Jack Progers, Well-Known to the Police, Accused of the Attack on Miss Frank.

LONDON, April 6.—(Special.)—Jack Progers was this afternoon arrested on a charge of having attacked yesterday on Miss Frank at her home on the Wellington-road.

The clue which cast suspicion on Progers was furnished by Robert Bremner of 122 Adelaide-street, whose door Progers came on Tuesday night, bareheaded, and asked for a hat. Bremner gave him the choice of two, and he took one. The man who attacked Miss Frank fled without his hat, which was found on the ground at the door, where the struggle took place.

Progers is a well-known character about the city. He was formerly a bartender. He has a known police record, dating back to 1898, when he was brought up in connection with the Bremer case. He has also been in court several times for being drunk.

Bremner identified Progers as the man to whom he had given a hat. The prisoner has not been taken to the police station, but he has been in court several times for being drunk.

J. B. McColl (Conservative), one of the members of the special committee which dealt with the bill, presented the views of those who are opposed to the measure in its present form.

He argued that horse racing was not a gambling, but a sport, and that the bill was a cruel and unjust measure.
