BANKERS PLAY TONIGHT.

There was no such thing as "spit ball" ever taked about until Ed. Walsh won a word's championship one day all by his lenely for the Chicago White Sox. Then there went up a cry that his skill was all due to the "spit ball."

Those who heard the story told of how Walsh had got his "spit ball" from Stricklett, a minor league pitcher, who was the first to discover it.

But cld players like Capt. Anson, who saw the first band of professional ball players and who has had in eye on the present-day professionals, and other officiency like himself remember that many of the cld pitchers wet the ball just as Stricklett and Walsh have done in recent years, but nothing was thought of it.

"Phonny" Martin, the famous slow ball pitcher of the old Eckfords of Brooklyn, against whom Angon batted in 1870, is alive today, and he says that Bobby Matthews, the leading pitcher of 1870, not only pitched the curve ball almost as soon as its discoverer, Arthur Cummings of the Stars of Brooklyn in 1863, but that Bobby had a ball that no other pitcher of that early period had, and that it was the very same sort of hall as that known today as the "spitter."

the Midget League, Osler in the Juvenile League, and Elizabeth in the junior League.

McCormick had a battle royal with O'Neill on the Moss Park ice, and won, 3-1. The boys from O'Neill were smaller, but they back-checked from start to finish, but the combination of the Macs and the goalkeeping of Hedges saved them. Teams:

McCormick—Hedges, goal; Hyndman and Britton, defence; Johnston, centre; Robinson and Thompson, wings; Bentley and Cohen, subs.

O'Neill—Heeney, goal; Train and Ross, defence; Silverman, centre; Williams and Burns, wings; Swift, sub.

Referee—W. G. Calhoun.

In the juvenile game, at McCormick, Osler played great hockey from goal to wings, and defeated Moss Park, 6-0. McBrien at centre was the best man on the ice and showed some expert stick-handling. McVicar was good, not only on the defence, but also time and again carried the puck right up to the Moss Park goal. For the Moss Park team, Joe Boland was a regular, little hornet, but the Osler defence kept him too far out to make his shots effective. Score by periods: First, 2-0; second, 2-0; third, 2-0. Totals, 6-0. The teams:
Osler—Rudd, goal; McVicar and Crowhurst defence; McBrien, centre; Poole and Heyd, wings; Watts, sub.

Moss Park—Bradshaw, goal; Richardson and Shaw, defence; Boland, Centre; Shaw and Broughton, wings; Rumac, sub.

Elizabeth and Moss Park had a nipand-tuck game at McCormick for the
