STANDARD OF EMPIRE EDITOR
SPEAKS TO THE CANADIAN CLUB*A. J. Dawson Delivers an Inspiring Address on the Development of the Empire—Mutual Understanding the Basis of True Unity

Before a large gathering of members of the Canadian Club, J. A. Dawson, editor of the Standard of Empire, gave an interesting and instructive address on Saturday afternoon at a luncheon in White's restaurant on the work being done by the Standard of Empire, the great imperialist newspaper. He spoke of the added knowledge of the dominion which was imparted every week to English readers and of the Standard as a medium for co-operation and goodwill throughout the empire.

Instances of practical results obtained from the wide publicity given to Canada and her resources and of the influence which was brought to bear on the great mass of the public in the old country were given. The address was listened to with the closest attention and the points made by the speaker were frequently applauded.

C. B. Allan, president of the club, was in the chair and briefly introduced the speaker. Mr. Dawson said that a few words of commendation of Canadian Club and expressive of his obligation to them and in part:

"Personally, I am of opinion that all editors and writers ought to visit Canada just as often as ever they can; and I am quite sure that ministers and members of the parliament who are imperialists ought to do so. To be up-to-date with regard to the British Empire one must be in touch with the biggest developing agencies, the biggest forces for progress and advancement within the empire.

"Today I am not at all singular in placing Canada at the head of such agencies and forces and influences; though even three years ago I might, in some quarters have been charged with certain exaggeration, as indeed I was, towards the end of 1907, for declaring in print and in speech, that Canada's progress was the most vital important and significant thing in the British Empire today. But since then a good deal of water has passed under the bridges, and most of it seems to have brought knowledge and appreciation of the dominion among the new nations of the empire.

"For instance, the Big Five, the great Overseas States that Canada leads us to, had no recognized multiplicity in the Old World then, and they have now. There was no Standard of Empire then, and there is now. One is supposed to be modest and reticent about anything with which one's self is connected. Well, gentlemen, I'm sorry, but I have no spark of modesty, and mighty little reticence where the Empire newspaper is concerned.

"Working for the Empire in any capacity whatever is highly educational in the matter of bringing home to one, recognition of one's own personal insignificance and unimportance. But the machine is a mighty big thing. So far from getting any modest notions about that, about the empire, and the work that lies before the men of our race in consolidating that empire and safeguarding it for our children, on the contrary one becomes day by day more deeply impressed with the magnitude of it, and the vital importance of the bearing, alone upon our family, but upon civilization and human progress generally.

"Disaster for the British Empire would be disaster for Christendom; it would put back the clock of human progress, and shackle chains about the feet of all mankind.

"And so I make no sort of apology for talking about the Standard of Empire. I would never have ventured to ask for Canada's support and co-operation in it, as I did last year, if a big man with a big organization under his control had not been willing to take hold, and give it practical shape and being in the world. All this C. Arthur Pearson did, and knew that the scheme was safe, and that I was free to claim Canada's support in Canada's own service.

"Now, gentlemen, Canada is apt to be represented as a lady. No, I make no reference to snow, but I offend mine own countrymen. We have no snow so much now there this year—but I say Canada is generally represented as a lady. I think of Canada, in my uncharitable way, rather as a lusty young man, with a keen face, eyes that see as far into a brick wall as any in the world, and an arm like a piston-rod or a steam hammer.

"He is no sort of a sentimentalist, this young giant of my imagination; but show him a really good thing, and he will hold it as if it were a firm and rather more quickly than any other kind of a man I know. That was the way he held the Standard of Empire, when I had the honor of submitting the scheme to him a little over a year ago.

"In effect Canada said: Go right ahead and I'll back you. You may say I said so. That was how I understood the young giant's benediction upon the Standard of Empire; and I can tell you I took it as the biggest trust of my life.

"Next morning the Standard of Empire will celebrate its first birthday. It has from the moment of its birth enjoyed the inalienable benefit of the wide and practical good will, and friendly co-operation of a very wide circle of friends throughout this great dominion, in the mother country and all over the Empire. We more of necessity, more slowly than the ordinary journal, our readers live, not in this town or that, nor in this country or the other, but scattered over every quarter of a family estate which covers nearly twelve million square miles.

"That is why a few weeks ago it gave me such deep pleasure to announce that a generous deed of ours had enabled us to offer a prize of $500 for the best essay that should reach us before September next upon the subject of The Governance of Empire.

"Full and frank discussion, familiarity with the part of side orders on one side of the Standard with the hopes and aspirations, habits and lives of our readers on the other side of the world, a platform and a mouthpiece for the United Kingdom and the Empire overseas; a voice in Canada for the Motherland and the rest of the world; a living bond of current intelligence, giving meaning and work-a-day reality and enduring strength to the steady growth of the world-wide British Realm our Empire—this is what we endeavor to provide.

"This is the great endeavor for which I want Canada's endorsement, support and co-operation. Canada is no mean nation, gentlemen, and this is no mean task. It is a big enough work to be worthy of Canada's approval and support, and that, I sincerely trust, it may always have.

The president's words of thanks to Mr. Dawson at the close of his address were

PEDDLER'S MONEY FOUND IN
SHACK*$2,733 Concealed Under the Floor of the Shanty Formerly Occupied by Five Italians—
Two Watches also Found

Amherst, April 4.—The missing money, amounting to $2,733, together with two watches which belonged to Edward Green, the peddler, who was murdered on the night of the 1st inst., was discovered early Saturday morning by Constable McRae, under the floor of the camp formerly occupied by the five Italian, Tony, Tony, Leo, Seppell, Sandy Murray and James and Andrew Hatch.

The circumstances of the discovery are said to be regarded by the crown as of importance as bearing on the evidence given by the condemned men, Arosha and Seppell.

The story of the Green murder will long be remembered for its series of sensational incidents. The dramatic events surrounded by the shooting, the chase of the murderers through the snow, the arrest in their camp, the complete disappearance of the money, the trial, conviction and subsequent confession of Arosha and Seppell, implicating their companions, have now been followed by the discovery of the money under the floor of the Amiel Johnson camp, wherein they all lived and in which the two condemned men were captured. The trial of the other three men may yet have other surprises in store.

All hope of recovering the missing money had practically been abandoned until two or three days ago, when T. J. Carter, who represented the crown at the recent trial, and the three Italian, received certain information which indicated where the proceeds of the robbery might be found.

Acting under his instructions Constable McRae left Amherst at 9:30 o'clock on Friday night and drove to the Johnson camp, which was reached about 1 o'clock on Saturday morning. He found the place deserted. Five of its former occupants were in jail, a lad, Frank Neal, who was living there when the two Hatches were being tried in Canada, and the boy Andrew Hatch, son of one of the prisoners, had gone to stay at Ridgwell's at Plaster Rock.

Armed with a lantern Constable McRae began his search. There was only one room in the camp and in examining the walls and floor he was discovered that one end of the board had been loosened. The board was taken up and investigation disclosed the fact that it was stuffed with rags. Beneath the rags was found a roll of bills containing $1,700 frozen into the ice, which the constable found. It was a couple of months ago he gave his consent to begin a free distribution of 2,000 copies a week, until a total of 10,000 of such free copies weekly was reached, and then maintain that.

"I wish you could all spend an hour or so with me in the office there in the Empire's ancient capital on a press of the Empire cables begin to speak, and the tale of our material filters in from across the sea, and from every capital in Canada; Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the East, and the West, part of the Empire. Each week messages come in from the different centres of our Empire, covering distances aggregating the total of 180,000 miles. There are well over 22,000 miles about Canada in the average issue; consequently more than a million words are first year of the paper's life, devoted to the work of expounding Canada, its resources, its claims and its needs to the whole British world.

"Do not suppose that these words are of no effect. I have received as many as forty letters of inquiry in one day about a single article describing some feature of Canadian life or enterprise. Shortly before I left England a gentleman named Mattis contributed an article describing the openings before men of enterprise and business in northern British Columbia. One hundred and thirty-five letters of inquiry were received with regard to that single article, and others are doubtless coming in now from far and near.

The writer of the article assured me that ninety per cent. of those letters were written by men having practical interests and possessed of capital varying in amount from a modest $500 up to $20,000.

"Articles describing the attractions offered by the different provinces of Canada bring up inquiries, not only from every part of the British Isles, but from every place in India, from civil servants who are approaching retirement—you know they must then retire to some place in the Empire, New Zealand, Tasmania, Africa, South Sea Islands, the West Indies, and even from out-of-the-way places in Europe—one from Timbuctoo, Africa, a couple of days before I left England, and another recent one I received from the South of France.

Mr. Dawson went on to speak of the fact that two English and two Scotch leading dailies and other lesser journals by the direct influence of the Standard of Empire, had been moved this year to range to devote special space regularly to Canada. The paper, he said, would always be willing to give its cable service free and glad to see it used. Competition did not enter into the question having practical interests and possessed of capital varying in amount from a modest $500 up to $20,000.

"But there are other matters, gentlemen," he continued, "of equally vital importance to us all. In olden times, United we stand, divided we fall, is more emphatically true of our race and its great stake in the world than of any other single thing. Empire commerce, Empire defence, our prosperity, our integrity, our very existence depends, gentlemen, upon the steady growth to keep pace with passing time and changing conditions of mutual understanding between far-scattered communities who uphold our flag throughout the world.

"That is why a few weeks ago it gave me such deep pleasure to announce that a generous deed of ours had enabled us to offer a prize of $500 for the best essay that should reach us before September next upon the subject of The Governance of Empire.

"Full and frank discussion, familiarity with the part of side orders on one side of the Standard with the hopes and aspirations, habits and lives of our readers on the other side of the world, a platform and a mouthpiece for the United Kingdom and the Empire overseas; a voice in Canada for the Motherland and the rest of the world; a living bond of current intelligence, giving meaning and work-a-day reality and enduring strength to the steady growth of the world-wide British Realm our Empire—this is what we endeavor to provide.

ANOTHER WOMAN
CURED*By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash, and was entirely cured after three months' use of them. Mrs. S. A. Williams, R. P. D. No. 14, Box 38, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States have learned the value of the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates a healthy, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as that of those you love, give it a trial.
