Southworth Captains Braves.
Boston, April 15.—Bill Southworth, formerly of the Pittsburgh club, and now fielder of the Boston Nationals, was appointed captain of the Braves last night by Manager Fred Mitchell, to replace "Rabbit" Maranville. Southworth is one of the three players Pittsburgh gave to Boston in exchange for Maranville.

TURF.

Baltimore, April 15.—Notification to Commander J. K. L. Ross, from all New York tracks that entries from his stables will be refused if H. Guy Bedwell, (toss) trainer, or ex-Jockey Carroll Stilling, are directly or indirectly connected with the same, has precipitated a turf crisis here.
This action, in identical letters, is taken to mean that Bedwell, recognized here by the Maryland Racing Commission, must be dropped from Ross' employ if the Canadian turfman wants to run his horses in New York.
The Maryland commission, resenting this lack of reciprocity, evidenced in the refusal to accept its recognition of Bedwell, indicates that it may take retaliatory measures. Appointment of a third and deciding member of the commission by Governor Ritchie will force the issue here. Bedwell, according to his counsel, is considering suit against August Belmont, and other New York track officials, for damages, he claims done him by the New York tracks action.

Eddie Kelly Dead.
Toronto, April 15.—Edward J. (Eddie) Kelly, a well known horseman of this city, and former double champion, died here last night, aged forty. Kelly rode for some of the most famous stables of the United States and Canada and had an international reputation as a skillful and daring horseman.

SUNKEN VALLEY OF SANDS.

(The Busy East.)
Below Fort Cumberland, when the tide is out, may be seen miles of flats, a sunken valley large enough in which to manoeuvre the army of the Empire. This area of sands is separated from the upland by a margin of soft, unctuous mud. Otherwise, squadrons of horses could gallop over the expanse without impediment. The sands are firm as a floor after they are bare. A horseman could race across the Bay from Minutiae to Wood Point at low water, without obstruction, save the channel, some 500 yards wide. When even slightly covered with water these sands are very treacherous. About 1865 a vessel loaded with the sands near Minutiae and disappeared entirely. In 1888 the schooner Naiaid was put on the sands above Mill Creek, near Minutiae Point, and in a few tides was buried so that even her masts went out of sight.

An outcrop of rock, met with on the Petitediac River, and extending in a narrow belt southwesterly down the Bay, has occasioned geologists, who disagree as to its proper place in geological history. Capitalists are now interested in it. If it belongs to the period assigned to it by Sir William Dawson and others, no especial economical value. It belongs to the next older rocks, the Devonian, in which formation Messrs. Fletcher, Ellis and others locate it, it belongs to the same series as the oil bearing rocks of Pennsylvania. Borings have been made at Dover and at Memramcook, by a company interested in oil development, without, as yet, definite results.

Joseph Jaffray while lunching in a Chicago hotel ordered six oysters as part of a meal costing 85 cents. Allowing 15 cents for a tip he figures that he is at least $799 to the good, for in one of the oysters he found a pearl that is valued by experts from $800 to $1,000.

WILLIAMS NO MATCH FOR TOM GIBBONS

Bridgeport Boxer Floored by St. Paul Heavyweight Seven Times in Four Rounds.

Tom Gibbons, St. Paul light-heavy weight, added the name of Larry Williams of Bridgeport to his list of victims last night, says the New York Times. Gibbons is in the process of eliminating rivals in a campaign for heavyweight recognition. Gibbons and Williams clashed in what was to have been the steller fifteen-round bout at the Pioneer Sporting Club.

The battle ended twenty seconds after the start of the fourth session, when Willie Lewis, Williams' chief second, shielded a towel into the ring, thus acknowledging the defeat of his man. The distress signal put an end to a bout which was as one-sided as it was uninteresting. Williams went down under Gibbons' blows no less than seven times in the short battle.

Gibbons so far outclassed his rival as to remove any element of competition which the bout might have developed. It was as if the St. Paul boxer was working on a punching bag. The Bridgeport boxer ran afoul of a pugilistic hurricane, and to toss in the sponge was the only means of relieving his plight. At that, the Bridgeport heavyweight assimilated a considerable amount of punishment before his chief second intervened. Williams displayed plenty of courage, but it availed him nothing against the powerful, slashing blows of the St. Paul boxer.

The battle hardly started before it was patent that it would not go the scheduled fifteen rounds. Gibbons took the offensive immediately and with a left hook almost curled Williams over the ropes. The Bridgeport boxer's knees sagged perceptibly from the impact of the punch and he leaned heavily across the ropes until a chance came to fall into a clinch. This opening assault put Williams on the defensive and he retreated steadily for the remainder of the bout.

Before a minute had elapsed Gibbons suddenly crashed over a wicked right to his rival's jaw and Williams went down hard. He remained on the floor until Referee Hickey had tolled off nine. Arising, Williams was shaky, but alert and for a time he retreated before the eager Gibbons, jabbing, hit-or-miss fashion with a left the meanwhile. Finally Gibbons nailed his opponent with a swishing right to the jaw and Williams again pitched to the canvas for another count of nine.

Another right to the jaw sent Williams down for the third time and he remained on the floor for a count of nine. The Bridgeport boxer, at this stage, was proceeding on his nerve alone, for he had not the slightest conception of an effective defense for the blows of his rival.

Twice in the second round, once from a left hook to the stomach and again from a right to the jaw, Williams was on the floor having "nine" counted over him. Gibbons worked industriously to the stomach and with jolting blows to the jaw in an effort to topple his rival for good and all, but Williams had plenty of courage and doggedly got up with each succeeding knockdown.

In the third round a left hook sent Williams down for the sixth time during the bout, but he weathered the storm of blows and left his corner for the fourth session. Twenty seconds after the round started Gibbons whipped over a right to the jaw and Willie Lewis shielded the towel

The knockout was one of several which marked the show and sent a large crowd of spectators home early. In the semi-final, scheduled for ten rounds, Johnny Smith, west side middleweight, knocked out Billy Busby of Brooklyn, in the fourth round. Smith floored Busby in the third and had the Brooklynite groggy and helpless in the fourth when the contest was stopped. Two knockouts were recorded in two of the scheduled six-round preliminary bouts.
