MILL IS DOWN AT GAGETOWN TO AID PARTY

Warden and Foresters from Fredericton and Hampstead Arrive

FOOTPRINTS FOUND 4 MILES FROM HOME

Third Day Passes and Still No Word Regarding Miss Eva Coy

Special to The Times-Star
GAGETOWN, Aug. 12.—No trace of Miss Eva Coy, missing since Tuesday night, has yet been found and today the whole of the male population of this district has joined in the search for her. Aid has come from as far as Fredericton and Hampstead and about 200 are engaged in looking for her today.

This morning the fire warden and foresters came down from Fredericton to organize the searching parties and give them the benefit of their experience in the woods. The Reid Brothers mill was shut down this morning and the employees sent out to help the searchers.

FOOTPRINTS LOCATED
Yesterday morning footprints were found which are believed to have been those of the missing girl at a point about 4 miles from home. They were fairly fresh and were not at a point where she would be likely to be picked up by motorists or fishing parties.

Last night was the third night since her disappearance and if she is in the forest Miss Coy must be practically exhausted by this time.

NO MOVE TO AND MARITIMES SAYS MURDOY

Despairs of Help From Rest of Canadian Provinces

Canadian Press
HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 12.—Hon. P. B. Murdock, formerly Minister of Public Works in the Dominion Government, was examined this morning by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, chairman of the Royal Commission investigating the claims of the Maritime Provinces, on his statement, previously presented, advocating the return to Nova Scotia of the control she exercised, previous to Confederation, over matters of taxation and the fisheries. Mr. Murdock agreed that he was chiefly concerned about results, and if remedies for the ill complained of could be found within Confederation, the situation would be met. At the same time he pointed out that no serious attempt had yet been made by the Central Provinces to assist the Maritimes in overcoming geographical handicaps well understood at the time of the union, and confessed to a certain amount of despair at their ever seriously attacking the problem.

EASIER TO RETAIN

The witness on the other hand contended that it was easier to retain than to regain markets, and stressed the prosperity of Nova Scotia at the time of Confederation, and stated that he emphasized the point that he had appeared before the commission by request, and suggested that the case of investigating conditions, was on the commission rather than on the general.

Otherwise she would have undoubtedly been drawn under the hind wheels of the automobile. Miss Mallin was not even scratched, but suffered somewhat from nervous reaction on the journey to Saint John. The American tourists who ran the young lady down were very attentive and ascertained her name and address lest she suffer after effects of the accident.
