TO LET—Seven room flat, heated, well as the nervous and mental breakdowns of life are due to the misunderstandings of these matters which are brought about by the lying and deceit of others. It is of very great importance that they do not think very highly of the child, or by comparing the child to another child unfairly. Mary is real smart, but John is dumb. No parent or teacher would permit such a remark in the presence of John if he understood the lasting harm that it is likely to do to John, particularly if often repeated.

ment that is merely an expression of a parent's or teacher's anger creates a perfectly proper anger and rebellion on the part of the child. The parent or teacher in losing his self-control is misbehaving worse than the child and the child knows it. Such punishment may create fear in a child so that it misleads, but his good behavior is purchased at too high a price for the reason that the hatred of the rebellion against authority becomes a fixed emotional habit that leads to great difficulties later on.

In helping the child to develop healthy mental habits as we help him to develop good physical habits, it is well to keep in mind one fundamental principle—to permit the child as much freedom of expression as possible; to permit him to find an expression for himself and his own particular interest in his play; in his work and in his contact with other members of the family. Where this expression is wise or unsafe or interferes with the rights of others, a wise parent will direct the child's energy into other and better channels but without forcing a repression on the child that will be harmful to his development.

"Help the child to maintain his own self-respect. Do not by word or action take away from him what self-respect he has. A parent who gains control over his child by breaking the child's spirit is not the child's parent but a tyrant."

"And finally, it should be remembered that if one desires to cultivate healthy mental habits in one's child it is well to do a little cultivating in one's own personal garden."

Carelessly driven automobiles caused 13,000 deaths in 1921.
