Many meetings were held, a committee being appointed to advance the proposition, with the result that a great deal of information was gathered as to the type of Boat required Even the approximate cost was ascertained, but the enterprise was so great that it was almost impossible for private citizens to carry it out unassisted.

There appears now, however, a way of solving the difficulty. Times readers are familiar with the plans Capt. S. Balcom is making on the West Coast of the Island for the commencement of whaling industry. He is establishing a station at Bamfield, at the entrance to Barkley Sound. He has had a steamer built especially for the business—a staunch ves-sel constructed of steel, with powerful engines and a speed of at least twelve knots-and he is prepared to carry on operations the whole year round when nce he starts.

Being a navigator of many years' experience on this coast, Cant. Balcom has foreseen the necessity for a lifeboat as much, possibly, as any other Victorian. As a sealer owing large interests, he has fully realized the dangers besetting a vessel's course when nearing these shores in tempestuous weather, and he has con-sidered well the services a steamer sidered well the services a steamer telling results as Dr. Hamilton's Manworking off the shore of Vancouver Island might render to distressed shipping during the stormy season. John E. Redmond declared that Ireand demanded home rule as a right. If there were the smallest reasonable chance of success he would not hesitate to advise his countrymen to end the present situation by an armed revolt, but they desired to terminate the ancient quarrel upon terms satisfactory and honbrable to both nations. He thanked Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman for his declaration, but said the radical party would find this question an urgent and insistent none, which would knock loudly
