The following assuing and well-told atory was published in one of the city papers of Gotham, about a down years ago. It occasioned at that time a good

Not long since two stylish-looking per-sons put up for the night in the upper Part of the city. On the morrow, after crdering their bill, they sent for the landlord, who was not long in waiting upon his aristocratic guests.

'I wish to purchase that old clock up ly an hour ago, sir,' was the reply of the stairs—will you sell it? asked the elder, ly an hour ago, sir,' was the reply of the while the younger cast his eyes over the columns of a newspaper which by upon the table. The landlord, who had set ne great value of the clock, except as a heir-loom, ugan to suspect it might possess the virtue of Heywood's chair, and filled with coin—and almost involuntarily the three greated to the columns of the colu the three accended to the room which contained it.

'The fast is, 'said the elder, I once won twenty pounds with a clock like won twenty pounds with a clock like that.'

'The fast is, 'said the elder, I once wonders of inventive progress is a meth system of work that can be performed all country without separating the worker that.'

Yes. You see there was one like it in a room down in Essex, and a fellow bet me he could keep his fore finger swinging thing else in the world. Graat thing else in the world. Else in t with the pendulum for an hour, only saying—'Here she goes, there she goes. He Gillespie & Sadler couldn't do it. I walked the money out

'You did! You couldn't walk it out of me. I will bet you ten pounds I can do it on the spot.' 'Done,' cried the stranger.

The clock struck eight, and with popped into a chair.

'Here she goes, there she goes,' and his finger wayed in curve his eyes fully fixed on the pendulum. The fellows interrupt ed-Where's the money! Plank the way. His fore-finger clowly and unrely went with the pondulum, and his left hand disengaged his purse from his pocket, which he threw behind him on the table. All was silent; the dapper man at Shall deposit the money in the hands of the waiter? 'Here she goes, there she goes!' was the only answer One of the wags left the room. Th landlord heard him go down stairs, but he was not to be disturbed by that trick. Presently the waiter entered and touch ing him upon the shoulder, asked-Mr. B are you crazy? What ar one of the neighbors, whom he invited up to see his master. They seconded and the neighbor, seizing him gently by the shoulder, in an imploring voice, said 'Mr. B., do not sit here. Come go down stairs; what can possess you to

'Here she goes, there she goes!' was the only reply, and the solemn face and the slowly moving finger settled the matter.

He is mad, whitepered the friend in low voice; we must go for a declor.'

The landlord was not to be duped, he was not to be deceived, though the whole town came to interrupt him.

'You had better call up his wife,' addit is your wife who speaks. wouldn't go; she would stay, and he thought she was determined to conspire against him and make him lose the wager.

She wept, as she continued-'What cause have you for this? Why do you do so? Has your wife'-'Here she goes, there she goes!' and his finger seemed to be tracing its, airy progress for anything she could secretain to

'My dear, ble still continued, thinking that the thought of his child, whom he, fondly loved, would tend to restore him. 'shall I call up your daughter?'

'Here she goes, there she goes!' the landlord again repeated, his eyes becoming more and more fixed and glazed, from the steadiness of the gaze. A slight smile which had great effect upon the minds of those present, played upon his face, as he thought of the many unsuccessful resorts to win him from his success in baffling them. The physician entered. He stood by the side of the busy man. He looked at him in silence, shook his head and to the anxious inquiry of his wife answered-'No. madam. The fewer persons here the better. The maid had better stay away; do not let the maid'-

"Here she goes, there she goes!" yet in harmony with the waving finger, issued from the lips of the landlord. 'A consultation, I think, will be essary,' said the physician. 'Will you run for Dr. A---?' The kind neighbor buttoned up his coat and hurried from the room. In a few minutes Dr. A--, with a other medical gentleman entered. 'This is a sorry sight,' said he to the doctor with him. 'Indeed it is, sir,' was the reply. It a sudden attack, one of the'-'Here she goes, there she goes!' was the sole reply. The physicians stepped into a corner and consulted together. 'It is advisable, I think that his head should be shaved,' said one of the physicians to the other, who assented, 'and I will despatch a servant for a barber, which resolution he immediately put into

'Here she goes, there she goes !' almost shouted the landlord, as the minute hand arrived at the desired point. The barber arrived; he was naturally s talkative man, and when the doctor made some casual remark, reflecting upon the quality of the instrument he was about to use, he replied-'Ah, ha! Monsieur, you say very bad razor. 'Tes beautiful! Look!-look! Ver gud, isn't he ?' 'Here she goes, there she goes!' scream ed the landlord, his hand moving on-on his face gathering a smile, and his whole frame in readiness to be convulsed with joy. The barber was amazed. 'Here she goes, there she goes! he responded, in the best English he could use. 'Vare, vare shall I begint Vat is dat he say ?'

'Shave him head at once,' interrupted
