posing Mr Crocket's dishonesty on the last trip he made to Dosktown, but the Gleaner's misrepresentations of a party of which the editor of the Avvaxce was one justifies out not resisting the temptation to tell the facts respecting the Gleaner man's poaching ex-pedition. We are, furthermore, requested to warn him, and all like him, that those who are, hereafter, caught poaching on Cair's river and its tributaries will be dealt with as the law requires. Indeed Crocket's case is still under consideration and he may yet have to pay for stealing trout which the minks afterwards stole from him.
