The bill was read a first time.
Sir Charlet Tupper urged on the government the advisability of taking up Mr. Fortin's insolvency bill and passing it this session. Canadian credit was suffering in Great Britain because of frauds which were being perpetrated under the laws of some of the provinces. He and Mr. Dobell had promised at a meeting of the Empire league in London to use their influence towards securing the passage of a general insolvency law for Canada.

Sir Richard Cartwright pointed out that grave differences of opinion existed among lawyers on the delays of such a measure and he could hardly promise that the government could take up the measure this session. He also pointed out that Nova Scotia, against whose insolvency laws most serious complaint had been made, had passed a bill providing for the equitable estates.

At five o'clock, after speeches by Kaulbach and Mills, Annapolis, the house resolved into committee on the franchise bill, Mr. Flint in the chair.

hill, Mr. Flint in the chair.

After recess the house spent an hour in committee on the Kettle River railway bill, and then took up the franchise act, continuing in committee till midnight, when the committee rose and reported progress, and the house adjourned.

OTTAWA, April 2.—The chief event of the week, as well as the chief avent of the week, as well as the chief event of the week, as well as the chief event of the session, was the killing of the Yukon Railway bill in the Senate on Wednesday night last. This result was, of course anticipated the second of the ast. This result was, of course, anticipated; for it was manifest from the very apon them.

A great effort is being made by the Opposition newspapers to have it appear that the Conservative majority in the Senate acted with deliberation and impressive dignity. The reverse is true. They received the measure pretty much in the received the measure pretty much in the same spirit that a hungry pack of wolves would pounce upon a lamb. They could not conceal a feeling of unreasoning hostility, and in private they did not hesitate to reveal the motive by which they were actuated. Without stopping to consider the merits of the matter, or to make fair allowances for the emergency with which the Government had to deal, they regarded the measure as something out of regarded the measure as something out of which great advantage would accrue to the Liberal Government. In other words, the were quite prepared to play a purely party were quite prepared to play a purely party game, feeling absolutely secure from accountability to anybody on earth.

This was the real reason; but that upon which they based their action, so far as their speeches were concerned was, of course, as higher grounds. They declared that they could not appreve of the bill because it had not been passed upon by the people. A contention more absurd could scarcely be thought of. When the last appeal to the country occurred, the rush to the Klondike country occurred, the rush to the Klondike was not dreamt of, and the existing condition of affairs could not possibly be in the dition of affairs could not possibly be in the popular mind. Moreover, this is an entirely new principle for the Senate to put forward. For eighteen years, during which the Conservatives were in power, not a single Senator of that stripe was ever heard to urge this reason against any measure which game before the Upper House. The garrymander, the Franchise Act, the Causdian Pacific Railway Bill and scores of other General were promptly passed, respecting Pacific Railway Bili and scores of other measures were promptly passed, respecting which this objection might have been applied with great force. As a defence, therefore, this plea is hollow and measingless.

Conservative Senators had no other object in view than the assertion of their power for the purpose of helping their political allies in the Commons. They intended to ambarrass the Government, and they have gertainly succeeded in doing so. They have demonstrated quite clearly that while the affairs of the country are supposed to be demonstrated quite clearly that while the saffairs of the country are supposed to be controlled by a Government rectiving power directly from the people, they are actually controlled by a partisan and absolutely irresponsible Senate. This fact effectively ting the hands of the Government, and the attuation suggests exceedingly grave considerations.

A further defence of the Senate is based on the assumption that the Liberals themselves are divided on the policy of the Government in respect of the Yukon country. This is a sheer invention, without a shadow of foundation. The Liberals were a unit on the essential features of the Bill, and that there may have been some slight differences of judgment with regard to the details, may fairly in regarded as a proper and healthy condition of things. A far more important consideration is the fact that five prominent conservatives voted with the Government conservatives voted with the Government on the division in the Commons. These stories of party differences and cabinet diseases are as a sensions and are from time to time published because the partisan

The more the Drummond Railway matter The more the Drummond Kallway matter is probed, the better the bargain appears. The Topy lawyers and inquisitors have not yet been able to east a shadow of suspicion and the transferment in any of its features. The Senate took it for granted that the line marvellous curves and grades and that it had practically cost the owners nothing. Kesterday the accountant of the Drummond Co. Railway was again on the stand, with all his books available, and he proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the road had actually cost over $2,000,000. He was followed by Mr. MoLeod, an engineer of the highest standing, who testified as to the exceptional character of the railway. More than pinety per cent, of the new part of the exceptional character of the railway. More than ninety per cent. of the new part of the road is in an absolutely straight line, and on the other part there are only two or three surves of any consequence and the grades are lower than very many on the Inter-
