OBITUARY.

Edward Cunnebell Woodworth. The death took place about 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, of Edward Cunnebell Woodworth at his home, 10 Union street, West St. John, after an illness lasting for some months. The deceased, who was 78 years of age, leaves a son, Edward L., and one daughter, Louise N., at home. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the late home, the services commencing at two o'clock.

Edward C. Woodworth was one of the best known residents on the west side of the harbor, having been born there, and his death is learned with regret by a very large following of friends. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and was beloved by all who knew him. Nearly all of his lifetime he followed the fishing business, and in his earlier days was considered a good oarsman, having rowed in a number of races with considerable success. Although an old man he was very active and was always able to follow up the business of fishing during the summer months, and worked along the docks during the winter. It was during one of the coldest days last winter that he had the misfortune of falling into one of the West Side docks and he became so chilled and exhausted that he had never been well since. Shortly afterwards he was severely injured by falling down a flight of stairs and it is thought that the two accidents hastened his death.

VOLUME OF TRADING SMALLEST IN MONTHS
 Business for Morning Session Slightly Over a Thousand Shares—Market Closed About at Wednesday's Level.

Special to The Standard.
 Montreal, Que., July 20.—Trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange reached the lowest point in many months this morning, when the total of the business transacted in the two and a half hour session amounted to only slightly over a thousand shares. Trading opened brisk in New York and considerable firmness was displayed except for the break in the Marine issues. This improvement in New York was reflected here but slightly, and although the majority of the stocks opened fractionally better, they did not hold very well and the close was about the same as last night. There will be no session of the Montreal Stock Exchange on Saturday next, July 22.

ZWILLING GOES TO INDIANAPOLIS.

WOUNDED SOLDIER GIVEN EXTRA CHEER BECAUSE HE WAS CANADIAN

Nothing Too Good for Maple Leaf Wearers, Writes Standard Man in English Hospital—The Death of Frank Withers.

Daniel Heywood of The Standard staff tells an interesting story in a letter to a fellow employee on this paper. Scout Heywood is suffering from injuries received while in action. Writing from Wharfedale War Hospital, Sheffield, Yorkshire, England, under date of July 21st, his letter is as follows:
 "I have quite a long story to tell you, and I will try my best to explain since leaving Ypres. Well, the last day I spoke to was poor Frank Withers. He was looking fine, and had just come out of the trenches at Hooga. He had done good work, as he was a good intelligent scout, and always eager to show his grit and abilities. I do regret to say that I have heard he was killed shortly after I left for down the line. He was a credit to the regiment. I knew poor Frank well, as we joined the Corps of Guides to gether and left St. John at the same time. We were about the first to go, believe he was only an hour or so before me to enlist. We were always together, and I was very proud of him, and if all the boys in St. John or anywhere else were as plucky and cheerful as Frank they would all be good ones.

The Travels of a Wounded Soldier
 "The first hospital I struck was about five miles from the place they call Oudern, near Popperhege, and I was sent then to the American Hospital at Etaples, manned by American doctors and sisters, and they did their very best for the poor boys. We got the best of treatment. I was washed and put in a nice clean bed given a cup of hot beef tea. The medical officer then came and I was bandaged up, and after that I had the best sleep I had had for months. On arrival of the Red Cross train I was put very gently on the ship. I was left on deck and had a good view of the ships going past. On arrival at Dover we were given a little kit bag each and cigarettes. The train was waiting so I got popped in for Sheffield. Well, it was fine. I was lying so I could see through the window, and it was great to see the green fields of Kent and to see the hops, because I like hops."

Extra Cheer for Canadians.
 "We arrived at London, and what a cheer went up. The ladies threw us some flowers, and we all kinds of cigarettes. Then we saw something very amusing, a bunch of women with men's trousers on, cleaning railway engines. I started to laugh and that's how I felt. We pulled out of there for Sheffield—just fancy only thirty miles from my home—and after about four hours more on the train we arrived at Sheffield, and what a cheer went up. I was put in a nice clean bed, and I was washed and put in a nice clean bed. When my turn came the officer said, "Canadian?" I said, "Yes?" so I got an extra cheer. Then some dear little girl came along and put a bunch of flowers on my stretcher and two packages of cigarettes. Then the stretcher bearers lifted me into a motor car and en route to the hospital we were cheered all the way."

On arrival at the hospital I was given more beef tea, washed again by the nurses and put to bed just like a youngster. The morning after I was put under the X-rays and got more bandages, also a clean shave. I have just found out I was knocked about more than I really thought I had been. But I am thankful I have all my limbs and eyesight. I am not allowed out of bed yet except for two hours a day.

Great Kindness Shown.
 "The people are more than kind to me. I have everything I ask for, but only take what I am allowed as it is sufficient. I get a bit of chicken or duck and beef tea and toast for supper, so that is very good, and I have a syphon of lemonade to drink each day, and a small bottle of beer, so you see I'm well attended. A lady took me and three other boys for a motor drive and tea, but I did not enjoy it as I felt pretty queer, and the nurses had wrapped me up so tightly that I could hardly breathe, then I had to be handled about so. We have oceans of visitors and they always bring cakes, candies, etc. My favorite is a little girl who visits me twice a week, just a child about ten years of age. She always asks to see her Canadian soldier and wants me to share her candy."

It is rather pitiful to see the poor boys here, some with legs off, and others with arms, and some blind, but I must say they are all cheerful and we have great fun. We have a small band, the instruments are mostly mouth organs. I play a tin whistle, but the nurses tell me if I will throw it away they will be very much obliged, so they don't think much of my playing. Then we get the variety artists once a week and they give us a good show at times, in fact it is fine all round, but still I would like to be back in old St. John at my work in The Standard. Don't think for a minute I would like to be back in Ypres, for the last time I was there it was surely hell. I know that I am booked for a good while here as I think I got a little of everything, but I don't mind, I suppose I have put a few Fritzes in the same position.

NOVA SCOTIA MURDER CASE FALLS THROUGH

Body of Victim when Exhumed Too Much Decomposed to Find Traces of Poisoning.

Annapolis, N. S., July 21.—At the preliminary hearing of the case of Mrs. Amos Warren, for the alleged poisoning of Mrs. Amos Taylor, held in Justice Vroom's court at Clements-Port, Dr. Finn, of Halifax, who was sent by the attorney-general reported the body had been exhumed, but owing to the state of decomposition he was unable to find any trace of poisoning, and as there was no direct evidence to connect the accused with endeavoring to put an end to Mrs. Taylor, with whom she was living, the case failed and Mrs. Warren was set at liberty.

interpret it. But in the character of the celebratory star as the slave of the machine she is the mistress of everything else with which she comes into contact.
 It is the story of an indomitable will battling against any odds with which she comes into contact. Mary—for that is the name of the character—has two sisters, one a moral weakling and the other a chronic invalid. They are all employed in the same factory, the owner of which, James Wharton, is a grasping man who refuses to make any concessions to guard the lives or happiness of his employees. Wharton has two sons, Owen and Ernest. The former is a big, whole-hearted chap and the other is worthless.
 Mary's sister Amy captivates Ernest, who finally succeeds in enticing the girl away from home. The invalid sister, Jane, meanwhile grows weaker and finally collapses. In helping her home, Owen first meets Mary, and the friendship ripens into love as he assists her in moving her smaller quarters when her slender savings are expended in doctoring Jane. Realizing that the girl's life depends on helping her, Mary goes to the city, Mary goes to Wharton, Sr., to beg for an advance on her salary, but is refused. Her beauty attracts Ernest, who succeeds in winning her affection by promised favors. He proceeds to make violent love to Mary until Amy, becoming suspicious, follows him to Mary's new abode with a revolver, bent upon avenging his duplicity. When Mary discovers Ernest's relations with Amy, she takes the revolver from the girl's hand and holds him at the point of the gun, while a minister is obtained. Then, concealed behind a curtain, with the muzzle of the gun pressed against Ernest's back, she forces him to go through the wedding ceremony with Amy.
 But that is only one of the tremendous battles that Mary wins in her struggle against poverty and avarice in this great story which furnishes Mary Pickford with a tremendous opportunity to demonstrate her remarkable histrionic powers to the full. In support of the star there appear several notable players, among them Loretta Blake, Dorothy West, John Howers, Robert Cain and J. Albert Hall.
 The Eternal Grind will be seen at the Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.
