

under influences that ultimately led him to the College. In the College he has spent three years of strong, earnest, hard work. He, too, has graduated with honors. Force of character, a dogged determination to bring things to a successful issue, and strong convictions are his. No mere carpet-knight is he, but a man ready for the hard service of the open field. John's future will be watched with interest by many friends both east and west.

J. A. ARMSTRONG and A. N. Marshall are both strong men. The former is a Peel boy, and the latter is a Novascotian. McMaster University will be enriched by the accession of these men. They both came to Woodstock during the present year, and in a very short time have covered a remarkable amount of work. They will both speak for themselves, not so much by words as by actions.

HUGH H. HURLEY is a native Quebecker. When quite young he went out to Michigan in pursuit of fortune. After spending some months in Michigan and seeing life in the pine woods he crossed the boundary into Manitoba, took up land and successfully carried on farming for eight years. Two and a half years ago he came to Woodstock to pursue a course of study for the ministry. This course he has now completed, so far as it is obtainable here. During his stay in Woodstock Hurley has made hosts of friends and he will be much missed by all. It always did us good to see him on the foot-ball field; but woe to the poor unfortunate that crossed his path when H. H. was making a charge—the result was usually disastrous to the other fellow. Nothing can ever divert Hurley from the most conscientious adherence to the right.

JAS. W. GREGG, of the City of the Straits, Detroit, has attained his goal, and expects that he will next year take a medical course at Trinity College, Toronto. It may be said in passing that the medical course in Woodstock College is limited, but supposed to be helpfully suggestive. The associations of medical schools are not generally such as one would fancy J. W. would care for, but Trinity may be an exception. At any rate, J. W. will not soon be forgotten at Woodstock College, and we have every reason to believe that his old Alma Mater will long have a warm place in his heart.

JAS. B. PATERSON is a Montrealler. He appeared on the scene of his future years of College life under the happy auspices of the genial John B. Warnicker. Some of the boys of the College still remember the gusto with which the old stager, John B., introduced the innocent and wondering protégé to all the marvellous things. In due time the Jas. B. of early days no doubt became an adept at the same service. J. B. plodded on in his scholastic work, and now he has the satisfaction of carrying his diploma of matriculation. But what about a goal-keeper in some hard-fought foot-ball contest? Perhaps J. B. will come up on occasion and fill the breach.

S. I. CLINDINNAN claims Belleville as his home. Clin is one of those good-natured chaps that aren't started by trifles, but if they do go off, it's best not to be too near. And then, the way Clin could swing
