QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS Miscellaneous.

BULL LACKING VIRILITY.

I have a very valuable Shorthorn bull, three years old, that is getting so lazy that I hardly know what to do with him. I am feeding him hay and oats, morning and evening, and a few turnips at noon. He gets out in the yard every fine day, along with the other cattle. Could you, or some reader of "The Farmer's Advocate" kindly advise as to the best method of dealing with him? Would you recommend giving him an iron tonic, or anything of that kind? He is middling fat.

BREEDER.

Ans.—We know of no better treatment than that you have adopted, of letting the bull run in the barnyard an hour or two daily with cows or young cattle, or in pasture in summer. We have no faith in drugs in such case. Can any of our readers recommend a remedy as the result of experience?

WOOD CUTTING.

1. What is the law regarding wood cutting? I let a job to A and B to cut wood (maple) 4 feet long. How high must they pile (8 feet long) for a cord?

2. Is there any law as to the length cordwood must be cut?

3. After telling the party to pile the wood in the bush, so it can be measured there—notwithstanding that, can I now haul all the wood in one pile, and make them take the measurement in such pile? Ontario.

R. M.

Ans.—1. Four feet.
2. No; but there may be a well-established custom of the locality respecting the matter, and if the parties did not, by their agreement, expressly fix the length for the wood, it might, and probably would be legally regulated by such custom.

3. We do not think that you can compel it.

SOY BEANS OR PEARL MILLET AS SOILING CROP.

Kindly state, in your paper, if Early soy beans or Pearl millet are good fodder plants. If not, what would you advise? What I wish is something that I can cut and feed green to milch cows when pasture gets short. Would Pearl millet be of any use as a green crop to turn under for enriching the soil?

S. E.

Ans.—According to results of experiments conducted at Guelph for several years, neither the Early Yellow soy beans nor the Pearl millet is considered a very valuable plant for fodder purposes. The Japanese Panicle millet and the Medium Green soy beans have proven much more suitable for growing in Ontario for the production of fodder. For cutting for the purpose of feeding green to milch cows, however, I consider a mixture of two bushels of Siberian or Banner oats and one bushel of Prussian Blue or Golden Vine field peas, per acre, will, in nearly all cases, give better satisfaction than either the soy beans or the millet. Pearl millet, as is the case with all varieties of millet, furnishes no valuable plant food to the soil which the crop has not already obtained from the soil. In the case of all leguminous crops, however, such as soy beans, peas, clovers, etc., a considerable amount of nitrogen, which has been obtained from air, is added to the soil when the crops are plowed under as a green manure. I would not recommend Pearl millet as a green manure crop.
