In the Senate Sir Mackenzie Bowell referred to the school question. He contended that the Government all through had acted legally. He remarked that if the Catholic minority expected their rights to be maintained they must look to the Conservative party as in the past. He was not in favor of the separate school system, but the words of the Sovereign once given must be held inviolate. The position he took in 1873 was against the establishment of separate schools but once established they could not be interfered with. The matter was now before the Legislature of Manitoba, and he trusted that that body would relieve the Parliament of Canada from the serious task which would otherwise devolve upon task which would otherwise devolve upon th. Dr. Gibson, pastor of Emanuel Baptist church, followed Hobe. His appearance on the witness stand created a great stir in the court room and the spectators evinced great interest in the testimony given by him. In reply to questions Dr. Gibson said that he left his study in the church on Friday evening, the 12th inst, at 7:39 and went to Dr. Vogel's house, his object being to attend a meeting of the Young People's Endeavor Society. Durrant did not arrive until after the business session was over, about 9:30. Witness did not know whether or not defendant had a key to the church. He met him there alone several times. "I went into my study on Saturday, the morning the body was found, and while there I heard noises in the front part of the church," said the witness. "I was soon afterwards told by a son of the janitor that the lock on the library door had been broken. I went to the room and saw the broken lock. I looked into the room, but not into the closet. I then returned to my study and remained there until the plane tuner drove me out with his noise, going to my ham. The first I knew of the body's being in the closet was when I went back to the church, on being told by Mrs. Noite that it was there."
