OUR FIRST REPUBLIC.

The first-republic in this hemisphere to succeed in compelling recognition of its independence was, of course, the republic whose proud capital is Washington. But there was an earlier one which died soon after its birth, of which little or nothing is said in our American histories.
When France, in 1764, ceded Louisi-

when France, in 170s, ceded Louis-na to Spain, the subjects of King Louis XV. objected to the transfer without their consent. The local gov-ernment submitted the question to the council, which, under the lead of Nichcouncil, which, under the lead of Nich-olas Chauvin de Lafreniere, rose in re-volt. Lafreniere called a convention of the people at New Orieans, while the new Spanish governor was on his way to the colony, and the convention se-lected a delegate to go to Paris to dissuade the French king from his course gate and sent back word that the peo-ple must recognize the authority of Spain.

It was then that the people of Louisi-ana resolved on a radical course. On the night of Oct. 28, 1768, the rebels took possession of the French forts and the gates of the town in the name of the republic of Louisiana. The old French governor offered no resistance, while the new Spanish governor tool refuge on a ship and sailed for Havana on Oct. 2, 1768, the council at New Orleans adopted a formal declaration of independence, officially named itself the republic of Louisana, elected Lefreniere "protector" and prepared a written constitution. This interesting government lasted from October, 1768, to July, 1769, when a Spenish squadros of twenty four vessels, with an army of 2,000 men, arrived at New Orleans. The new republican state was destroyed and five republican leaders, included ing Lafreniere, were put to death Then all the republic's official papers including its declaration of independence and constitution, were burned in the public square. "

A BOWERY INCIDENT.

The Invited Guest Who Was Called Before the Feast.

The missionary had finished his talk to the crowd of derelicts in a Bowery mission and went around the room to shake them by the hand. There was one man sitting on a bench whose face was so utterly loathsome that the missionary's gorge rose in his throat, and he was compelled to pass him by. The man's dulled eye marked the look of disgust, and in a tone of mingled de-jection and resentment he cried out: "Say, mister, why don't you shake hands wid me?" The young missionary turned, conscience stricken, looked into the sin scarred features and grasped the man's

"Really, brother, you must forgive me," he stammered. "I—I couldn't help it when I saw you-your face. But Pil with me tomorrow night."

The broken man glanced at his rags in confusion, blushed like a girl and gasped:

"Wot! Me take dinner wid you! Me go to your house! Me!"
"Yes, I mean it. I'll come tomorrow night and get you."

True to his word, the missionary pre-rue to an word, the missionary pre-sented himself at the lodging house the next evening and inquired for the man. A corpse was lying on the table, a handkerchief spread over its face. The clerk jerked his thumb in the direction of the body.

"That's Wilson," he said. "He had fixed himself up and was waitin' for you; dropped dead half an hour ago."

the new curate asked, who was standing behind the squire's daughter.

A little girl was suddenly struck with a brilliant idea. She held up her hand eveltadly.

Physicians are calling attention to the fact that influenza or grip has come to stay. Persons who are recovering from grip or influenza are in a weak condition and peculiarly liable to pulmonary disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs, bronchitis, lung "trouble" and other diseases of the organs of respiration. It is the best tonic medicine for those whose strength and vitality have been exhausted by an attack of grip. It purifies the blood, cleansing it of the poisonous accumulations which breed and feed disease. It gives increased activity to the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of pure blood, rich with the red corpuscles of health.

"A word for your 'Golden Medical Discources."

"A word for your 'Golden Medical Discovery's writes Mrs. R. A. Bender, of Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio. "We have been using it as a family medicine for more than four years. As a cough remedy and blood purifier there is nothing better, and after having the grip Drierce's Golden Medical Discovery is just the right medicine for a complete bracing up."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs.

The sluggish liver is made active by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

HOW TURKS MAKE COFFEE.

It Isn't Easy, but the Product Is De-lightful In Its Flavor. To make the perfect cup of Turkish coffee is, like many other things, very easy when the maker knows how to do it, but unless the art has been learned in Turkey it is difficult.

No one can make a perfect cup of coffee unless he has been to Turkey.

There is as much difference between the ordinary cup of coffee and the exquisite and alluring beverage with all its subtle aroma as made by the artist as there is between horsefiest and the best English beef. The Turks method is simple. They have many little pots of various sizes. If they want to make two cups only they use the smaller one, and if three cups a larger one. When the water has boiled they fill the little pot almost to the top with water, then put in three lumps of sugar and put the pot on the fire to boil. When it is hot they put in two teaspoonfuls of coffee ground very fine and then stir it round until it is thoroughly mixed with the water.

The next step is to place the pot on the fire again and watch it very carefully until the coffee bubbles up to a and before this froth over the side you take the pot from the fire and tap the bottom gently on the stove till the froth goes down. Once again the coffee is allowed to bubble over the fire, and the process of tapping the pot on the stove is repeated three times.

When the froth rises to the surface for the fourth time the pot should be taken from the fire and the coffee should be poured first into one cup and then into another, so that each cup contains a portion of the froth on the

The Englishman cannot make coffee at all. He tries hard, but never succeeds either in making a perfect cup of Turkish or French coffee. The Frenchman, on the other hand, also tries hard to make a perfect cup of Turkish coffee, but he meets with lit-tle more success than the Englishman. One thing must never be forgotten— the coffee must be freshly roasted and ground. It must not be roasted toe black. A dark brown is the ideal color. Then the flavor is divine.

HAD THREE ESCAPES FROM BURIAL

Rosseau, who was the oldest inhabitant of the village of Les Martingues in France, and who recently fell into a trance and awoke to find himself in a coffin, has died in earnest. His relatives, however, have asked that the funeral be postponed. Three times Rosseau fell in a trance. One time his body was actually taken to the village church, and the dirge being song by the clergy, when he awoke. The mourners heard the sound of struggling within the coffin, and rescued him in time.

The black squirrel delights in the new-fallen snow like a boy—a real boy, with red hands as well as red boy, with red hands as well as red nicks, and an automatic methanism of bones and muscles capable of all things except rest. The first snow sends a thrill of joy through every fibre of such a boy, and a thousand delights crowd into his mind. The gliding, jalling coasters on the hills, the pressure states with nitches. the passing sleighs with nitches on the runners for his feet, the flying snowballs, the sliding places, the broad, tempting ice, all whirl through his mind in a delightful through his mind in a delightful panorama, and he hurries out to catch the elusive flakes in his outstretched hands and shout aloud in the gladness of his heart. And the black squirrel becomes a boy with the first snow. What a pity he cannot shout! There is a superabundant joy and life in his long, graceful bounds, when his beautiful form, in its striking contrast with the white snow, seems magnified to twice its real size. Perhaps there is vanity as well as joy in his lithe, bounding well as joy in his lithe, bounding motions among the naked trees, for mature seems to have done her ut-most to provide a setting that would best display his graces of form would best display his graces of form and motion.

When the falling snow clings in light, airy masses on the spruces and pines, and festcons the naked tracery and clustering winter buds of the maples—when the still air seems to fix every twig dad branch and clinging mass of snow in a solid medium of crystal, the spell of stillness is breken by the silent but joyful leaps of the hurrying squirrel. How much alive he seems, in contrast with the silence of the snow, as his outlines contrast with its perfect white! His body curves and elongates with regular undulations as he measures off the snow with twin footprints. Away in the distance he is still visible among the maked trunks, a moving patch of animated blackness. His free, regular footprints are all about, showing where he has run hither and thither. With no apparent purpose except to manifest his joy in life. with no apparent purpose except to manifest his joy in life. His red-haired cousin comes to a lofty opening in a hollow tree and looks out with an expression of disgust and disappoinment on his face. He does not like the snow-covered landscape spread out so artistically before him. Another cousin, the chip munk, no longer displays his daint-ily-striped coat. Oblivious in his burrow, he is sleeping away the days and waiting for a more congenial

But the black squirrel, now among the branches of an elm, is twitching from one rigid attitude to another, electrified by the crisp atmosphere and the inspiration of the snow. Again he is leaping over the white surface to clamber up the repellant bark of a tall hickory. Among the larger limbs he disappears. As he never attempts to hide he must have retired into his own dwelling to partake of the store laid by in the season of plenty. Hickory nuts are his take of the store laid by in the season of plenty. Hickory nuts are his favorite food, and the hard shells seem but an appetizing relish. He knows the value of frugality, and gathers them before they are ripe, throwing down the shrivelled and unfilled, that the boys may not annoy him with atones and sticks. In winter he is the happiest of all the woodland family. He does not yield to the drowsy, numbing influence of the cold, nor to the depression of a season of scanty fare, but bounds along from tree to tree, inspired by the subtle spirit of winter and reveling in the joy of being alive.

An Old Friend in England.

Mr. Edward Bayly, a well known Toronto barrister, visited Great Britain last summer, and had a curious experience in Manchester. In the grill-room of the Midland Central Hotel he was served by a very obsequious waiter, who, half through the meal, observed, deferentially:

meal, observed, deferentially:
"Beg y' pardon, sir, but aren't

"No," answered Mr. Bayly. "I'm a

"Very glad to see it," said Mr.

"Very glad to see it," said Mr. Payly.

And so, after lunch, the waiter, escorted the visitor to the snoking-room. There he produced a time-wors and much-handled edition—sf all books in the world!—of Dr. Scadding's "Toronto of Old."

"Why, where did that come from?" sked Mr. Bayly.

"Don't know, sir. It has been here for a great many years, I know."

And Mr. Bayly was so pleased to meet an old friend that the fortunate waiter got an unusually large tip.

The historic Pyx Chapel, in West-minster Abbey, the massive door of which is a familiar object in the which is a familiar object in the dark cloisters, is about to be lighted by electricity and thrown open to the public. The chapel is now under the control of the office of works. At one time it was the depository of the regalia of the Scottish kings, and it was here that the famous robbery of the £100,000 which had been collected for the Scotch wars by Edward I. took place.

The nature of the concession to the public may be inferred from the fact that access to this remarkable apartment, with its double doors of oak, has hitherto been possible only by the aid of seven keys in the possession of as many officials of the Exchequer. In former times the Gov-ernment standards and assays of gold were deposited here. Among the other contents of the place are a curious stone attar and some ancient chests, in which State documents, exchequer taily sticks and other things are stored. The woodwork of the inner door was formerly covered with human skin, a warning, no doubt, to the burglariously inclined, but little, if indeed any, of this grucsome covering remains.
