

DR. PATTERSON'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Mathematics and science in some of the universities in which the subjects of study will be surveyed in relation to other subjects and in relation to life. But when all is done that can be done through a curriculum it may fairly be questioned whether an attempt to organize the curriculum so as to present an organic unity of subject matter, will succeed. The ultimate unity must be found elsewhere. But where is it to be found if not in the organic unity of the curriculum. No suggestions seem to be more to the point than those of John Adams, in his latest work "Modern Developments in Educational Practice."

The real unity of instruction must be found in the staff or faculty which acts as an educational unit in its influence on the individual pupil. Wiser words have not been spoken. Words far-reaching in their implication! Words the whole meaning of which is not on the surface! It is the faculty that makes an institution. It is the faculty that gives unity to a curriculum. It is the faculty that interprets life not as a series of unrelated departments but as one house of many mansions. It is a faculty, every man of whom sees life singly and sees it whole, that educates not only for a livelihood, but unto life. It is only such a faculty as this that can escape the charge of the French critic, to whom I have already referred, that of being "a fragment of a professor, teaching a fragment of a subject to a fragment of a student."

BRETON MAID SELLS HER HAIR

Wig-makers and buyers of hair go to Brittany, where they know they can procure the best heads of hair. The locks are of fine texture, and the warm climate is favorable to a rapid growth. Moreover, young and old all wear a cap which completely covers the head. Every year the fairs that are held in the towns are attended by hundreds of women, who come for the purpose of selling their hair. You may see them standing in rows, with their luxuriant tresses combed out ready for the inspection of the buyer. One at a time they advance and make their bargains, frequently for cash, but they often for laces, ribbons, and cheap jewelry, which the cutter has brought with him in a basket. There is a shrill and excited chattering, but at last a bargain is struck, and the young lady sits down and is divested of her charms. Then another comes forward, and the same scene is rehearsed. It is estimated that at least 100,000 lbs. of hair are needed for the English market every year at ordinary times.

CHOICE RECIPES

Fig Pudding.—One cup chopped figs, 1 cup milk, 1 cup molasses, 1 1/2 cups graham flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons soda moistened with hot water, steam 3 hours.
Bulgarian Stew.—Slice 8 potatoes, season with salt and pepper, add 1 1/2 pounds round steak, 6 or 8 small onions sliced and seasoned, 1 1/2 cups thin cream or milk and butter, 1 quart can tomatoes seasoned. Bake three or four hours in casserole.
Stuffed Prunes.—Soak prunes overnight. In the morning drain, remove pits. Allow 2 level teaspoons peanut butter for each prune. Put peanut butter in a bowl; add 1 tea spoon cream or milk; beat well, adding more cream until peanut butter is light, but not soft. Fill prunes with mixture. Is a nice luncheon box dish.
Colonial Cake.—Mix 1 teaspoon salt with 1 cup white corn meal, scald it with just enough hot water to dampen it. Then add enough cold milk to form a very stiff batter (almost a dough). Stir it well and drop in cakes about 1/2 of an inch in thickness on a buttered pan. Bake in a hot oven for 25 minutes. Split open and butter while hot. Serve with sirup.
Cally Lily Cakes.—Make a sponge cake mixture of 3 eggs, well beaten; scant cup of sugar, 2 tablepoons of water, 1 cup of flour, 3 tablepoons of baking powder (beaten with the eggs), a little salt and flavoring. Have ready a number of buttered saucers, into each put a tablespoon of the mixture and bake. Make paper cones in shape of lilies and when cakes are done shape with the hands and slip into cones while hot. When cool, fill with whipped cream or apple snow.

Sandwich Biscuit.—Sift together 1 pint flour, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder. Rub to a soft dough with milk. Roll out and cut into rounds. On one-half of the rounds spread a little soft butter; add a thick layer of finely chopped and seasoned cold meat, cover with remaining round and press together. Brush tops with milk place 1 inch apart on greased pans and bake in a hot oven.
Sponge Muffins.—One cup of sweet milk scalded, one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth cup of warm water, 3 cups of bread flour, 2 tablepoons of shortening, 1 small teaspoon of salt and 1 tablepoon of sugar. Mix the shortening into the flour, add the dissolved yeast and the other ingredients, and pour the mixture into greased muffin pans; set the pans in a warm place for four or five hours, when the batter will be raised and light. Then bake in a hot oven for one half hour. These are delicious.
