JOHN GALSWORTHY.

Philosophy of Literary Man Who Refused a Title.

"Four names stand out as super-distinguished in the English fiction of to-day—Thomas Hardy, Rudyard Kipling, Joseph Conrad, and John Galsworthy," writes Mr. Clement Shorter in the London Sphere.

"A few years ago we would not have minded, but to-day it is a relief to all lovers of the artist in literature that these four men are untitled, and that at least three of them have refused the dubious honor. Two of the four have made an equal reputation in prose and poetry, the other two in fiction and the drama. Mr. Galsworthy is the least story-teller of them all, but he is a great artist nevertheless. His gift is that of an extremely brilliant essayist or biographer, potent toathom the motives of individuals.

"All Mr. Galsworthy's philosophy is summed up in the following—'Sixty-four years that favored property, and had made the upper middle-class, buttressed, chivalled, polished, it till it was almost indistinguishable in manner, morals, speech, appearance, habit, and soul from the nobility. An epoch which had allied individual liberty so that if a man had money he was free in law and fact, and if he had not money he was free in law and not in fact. An era which had canonized hypocrisy, so that to seem to be respectable was to be. A great age, whose transmuting influence nothing had escaped save the nature of man and the nature of the universe."

"These words are written in reference to the death of Queen Victoria. Never has any writer touched the comfortable, propertied, upper-middle class that lives in the best houses, that gives the best dinners, with a surer touch than has Mr. Galsworthy. Thackeray's brilliant work in the same direction is more fantasy in comparison—which is not necessarily to say that Mr. Galsworthy is a greater artist than Thackeray, but he sees more deeply into the motives which guide man."

Slime-Hair Dressing.

The wives of Slime noblemen cut their hair so that it stands straight up on their heads. The average length is about one inch and a half.

Worse Than Outright Lies.

Many a man who would shrink from a false statement will give a false color—which is still more unfair, because more difficult to correct.

A Start in the Right Direction

The temptation to spend money in your pocket is greater than when your money is in a savings account in the bank. That margin of temptation may mark the difference between an opportunity to go into business later on or of working for wages with nothing saved and nothing ahead, at the end of your working years.

Why not open a savings account in The Bank of Nova Scotia to-day?

Your account will be welcomed and you will have made a start in the right direction.
