About Copper King

Mattresses.

The frames are made of kiln dried white maple, and strong enough to withstand any strain. The fabrics are woven of the highest grade tinned mattress wire—reinforced with special copper woven bands—each mattress has three special cross wires running from side to side of the fabrics. This improvement distributes the load—an improvement found in no other mattress. We believe this is the best mattress on the market for comfort, costs less than many makes, and is always entirely satisfactory. Prices run from $2.75 up to $4.50.

In Matters of Dress.

It is The Correct Thing.

To dress according to one's means.

To avoid all extremes and eccentricities in dress.

To remember that neatness and scrupulous cleanliness are the fundamentals in a proper attire.

To pay dressmakers and seamstresses a fair price for their work To pay them promptly.

To avoid conspicuous attire on the street.

To dress in society as the occasion demands.

For people in moderate circumstances to avoid unpleasant comment by wearing inexpensive gowns in which good taste and a graceful style compensate for the want of cost.

To remember that one of the marks of a lady is to dress as one.

To keep one's clothes in perfect order.

To make a liberal use of soap and water.

To leave rouge to the green room where it is a necessary adjunct, and to the woman who has no reputation to be compromised.

To remember that tight lacing, and any device of the toilet which injures the health, is not only bad taste, but is positively wrong.

To remember that no lady, to say nothing of a Catholic worthy of the name, will wear a gown cut immodestly low.

To dress becomingly in the home circle.

To remember that the body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, and is therefore worthy of proper care.

To think less of adorning the body than the soul.

IT IS NOT THE CORRECT THING.

For a woman to spend more than she can afford on dress.

For a woman to spend the greater part of her time shopping, studying fashion-plates, devising costumes, and sewing.

To follow an ugly and unbecoming fashion.

For poor women to try to rival rich ones in matters of dress.

To haggle over a reasonable price for dressmaking and sewing.

To show disrespect to a hostess by appearing at her entertainments in unsuitable apparel.

To wear showy and expensive costumes at church.

To wear untidy costumes at church, as if anything were good enough for the house of God.

To wear torn stockings, ripped gloves, shoes with buttons off, gowns in need of dusting and renovating, hats out of date and unbecomingly soiled collars, cuffs, or ruching, and to make a liberal use of pins.

To use rouge on the cheeks, ink on the eyebrows, or blondine on the hair.

To forget that an immodest gown is a mark of low breeding.

—The Correct Thing for Catholics.

Marriage of the Marquis of Bute.

There were great rejoicings in Ireland and Scotland at the marriage of the Marquis of Bute and Miss Augusta Bellingham, which took place at the pretty little church of Kilsaran on July 6th. The people in the village of Castlebellingham and the district had been looking forward to the day with lively interest, and their artistic tastes were admirably applied in the preparations which had been made for the reception of the bride, the bridegroom and the fashionable gathering that assembled for the ceremony. Every house bore evergreens and flags, and signs of rejoicing in the form of arches of flags with complimentary mottoes were to be seen on the roads leading to the village. The bridegroom and his best man, Lord Ninian Stuart, drove to the Church at Kilsaran before ten o'clock. The Marquis's piper, who played various march tunes on the way, preceded them. Large crowds lined the route, and the Marquis as he passed was heartily cheered. He was in Highland costume, as were also Lord Loudoun and Captain Colin MacRae, who accompanied him to the church. Kneeling at a prie-dieu, the Marquis awaited the ceremony. The bride, who, accompanied by her father, Sir Henry Bellingham, arrived soon after ten o'clock, was greeted with loud cheering on approaching the church. At once the Scotch piper struck up the tune, "Happy we're all been together," and "An Invocation to the Holy Spirit" was effectively sung by the choir of Marlborough-street, Dublin, conducted by Mr Vincent O'Brien. Walking up the aisle, she took her place at the prie dieu. The church was very handsomely decorated with festoons and evergreens. The ceremony was performed by the Rev

Right Rev. Maxime De Celles, Bishop of the Diocese of Hyacinth, Canada, died on July 7.

During the late great riots at Odessa, in Russia, St. Gregory's Catholic Church was burned to the ground, and the priest in charge brutally beaten by the revolutionary hordes.

Dom Germain Morin, O. S. B., of the Abbey of Maredsous, the well-known patristic scholar, has received from the University of Oxford the honorary degree of doctor of letters.

The "Courier," of Naples, a Liberal weekly, published an account of a free-thinking workman named Felipe Barcone, of Liberi, Italy, who suddenly became paralyzed after striking a statue of the Blessed Virgin.

There are over 330 Masons in the French Chambers! Until these men are dismissed, little good can be expected for Catholic France. In the current issue of the "National Review" there is a luminous article on their work by the Rev. Dr. Barry.

A press despatch from the City of Mexico states that some two hundred French priests who have had to leave their native land are expected to arrive in Mexico shortly, and will remain in the republic permanently. Among them are many Jesuit fathers.

It is stated that on Queen Alexandra's recent visit to Marseilles, France, she went the first day to the church of Notre Dame de la Garde, accompanied by the Grand Duchess George of Russia, expressed her pleasure, examined the basilica throughout, "bent down, as if in prayer, before the sanctuary" and signed the roll of honor.

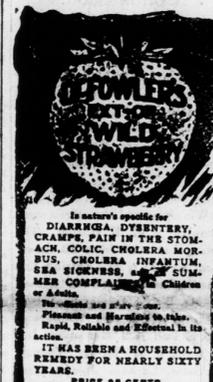

English exchanges record with deep regret the death of Rev. Michael Moloney, of Westminster Cathedral, London, Father Moloney was a leader in the Gregorian movement, and it was he who originated the summer school at Appuldurcombe, Isle of Wight. His name is on the programme as registrar for this year's sessions. An Irishman, fond of the ancient tongue of his country, he showed a great interest in the St. Patrick's Day service in Irish at Westminster Cathedral.

An appeal has been issued for papers and documents to promote the beatification of Right Rev. Dr. Hartmann, Vicar Apostolic of Patna, India, whose death, after many years of heroic and wondrously fruitful missionary labor, occurred in 1864. He was the founder of the "Catholic Examiner," of Bombay, and the author of a celebrated catechism in Hindustani, with a vocabulary and grammar. He also prepared an Urdu version of the New Testament. Bishop Hartmann was a member of the Capuchin Order.

There has been a long delay, says the London "Catholic Times," in issuing the new Vatican edition of the Plain Song which the Holy Father entrusted to a special commission working with the French Benedictines of Solesmes. The cause was that there have been two schools among the monks, each striving to get its own views adopted as the standard—the older school of Dom Pothier, to whose genius the revival is due, and Dom Mocquereau, who has artificialized the chant. Members of the former school declared that there was danger that, instead of practicability, archaology pure and simple might be brought into vogue in the Church by Dom Mocquereau and his party. But they are content now that the Pope has settled the question. By a letter written by the Cardinal Secretary of State to Dom Pothier, the venerable abbot has been appointed the sole responsible editor, and his edition of the "Graduale" of 1895 is the standard. This is regarded as a complete victory for the practical school.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"The following note reached a schoolmaster from a boy's father, informing him of the cause of his son's absence from school the previous day. It naturally caused some merriment, and, judging from the way he signed the epistle, it in no way flatters him. The note ran as follows: "Please excuse Tommy not being at school yesterday as he was kept at home to wash—his father."
