The Kaiser's Left Arm.

On January 27th, 1859, Berlin waited for the guns which were to announce the birth of the first baby, to the Princess Royal of Great Britain, who married Prince Frederick William of Prussia in 1858. For an heir 101 guns are fired, and for a daughter only twenty-two. At the twenty-third report all Berlin went mad with delight. The crowd near the palace captured old Field-Marshal Wrangel, clamouring for particulars. "Children," he said, "all is well. It is as fine and sturdy a recruit as one could wish." Thus was the birth of the present Kaiser announced. But the public little knew of the tragedy which had almost happened, and which might have resulted in the death of the baby Prince and his mother.

It is related in a biography of the Empress Frederick just published that the bedroom of the Princess at the Old Schloss, the Royal Palace in Berlin, was next to the death chamber where a previous King had died. This was kept in the same state as on the day of his death, and the Princess had to pass through it to her bedroom or her dressing room. It was in circumstances like these that the present Kaiser was born, and his defect at birth—a helpless left arm—was the result of a most unfortunate mischance. The letter summoning Dr. Martin, the English doctor that Queen Victoria desired to officiate at the birth, was put by a stupid servant into the post instead of being sent direct, and it was this delay which caused all the trouble. "Both mother and baby were for a time in imminent danger. No anaesthetic was administered, and the Princess, with characteristic courage, looked up to her husband, who held her in his arms the whole time. None of those about her thought her strength would hold out, and one of the German doctors actually said in her presence that she would die, and her baby too."

Fortunately, this dismal prophecy was not fulfilled, and as the years went by the young Prince grew up to be a fine, manly boy, in spite of the fact that he was permanently crippled.

Brother Kills Brother.

While Hunting One Mistakes the Other for a Deer. Moncton, Nov. 12. — A distressing shooting accident, with fatal results, is reported from Kent County. James and William Bagnell, about 25 and 27 years of age, and belonging near Harcourt, were in the woods on the Salmon River, about ten miles from Harcourt, on a shooting expedition. After travelling together for some time they separated, and about ten or fifteen minutes later William saw an object behind a tree in the distance which he mistook for a deer. He fired and hearing groans ran to the spot and found his brother lying on the ground unconscious, with a bullet wound in his abdomen. After placing his coat under his brother's head to make him as comfortable as possible he rushed to the nearest settlement, a place called Mortimore. He secured Dr. Fairbanks, of Harcourt, and went back to the spot where the accident occurred and found the unfortunate victim of the shooting dead.

Suffragettes Break Up Meeting.

SHEFFIELD, Nov. 17. A suffragette disturbance occurred here to-night, when Mr. Snowden, the Socialist member of parliament for Blackburn, attempted to address a no-subscription meeting arranged by the Labor Party. He was howled down by suffragettes. Stewards promptly took a hand and in the scrimmage were attacked by male sympathizers with the women. Some of the stewards were kicked and badly bruised, and in spite of the fact that many disturbers were ejected, the uproar persisted to such an extent that after half an hour the meeting was abandoned.

Advice.

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash." Advice and air are the only free things left—even now, since the democrats have fixed up their tariff bill. Advice is given in enormous quantities by the rich and poor alike. No man is too hard up to stop in the midst of his labors and give a huge, irregular chunk of advice to some total stranger who may be needing it. On the other hand, advice is the one thing which is never stolen. Men have purloined shoes, hot stoves, tombstones, box constrictors and grizzly bears, but advice is perfectly safe. A man can leave forty million dollars' worth of advice in an exposed position for years.

Advice is more plentiful than dirt. Everybody is plentifully stocked with it and everyone does his best to get rid of it. Nothing is more affecting than to see a ragged and dejected man propping up a five story building by leaning against it on the sidewalk and trying to give away some pricelessness to the training and conduct of presidents. Year after year, while his children are clamoring for bread, while he offers his advice in vain. No president will even stop and take a sample. Older and older he grows, distended with undisposed of advice and will anyone take the time to extend a helping hand and relieve him? Not much. This is a vain and busy world, and our best friends may burst with advice for all we care.

One reason for this singular prejudice against advice is the fact that most children are brought up on it. After a child has existed for ten years on plain food and unlimited advice he cannot be blamed for scorning either for the remainder of his life. When an adult has any other property which is of no use to himself and which he cannot give away he goes and lays it on the ash pile. But if he has any surplus advice which no one else will accept he goes home and gives it to his children. One can force a child to take advice by well known methods, just as one can force him to take medicine. But it spoils the market for advice in that particular direction after he grows up and can't be thrashed any more.

The best way to produce advice is to grow old and rich and famous. The next best way is to grow old and poor and unsuccessful. The output in both cases is about the same, only the successful man tells you what to do and the unsuccessful man tells you what to do.

Every little while someone accepts some advice. There are now many thousands of these people in the world. Half of them are hunting their advisers with tears of gratitude and the other half are hunting them with a club. This proves that advice giving is as risky as advice taking. But man is ever adventurous.

Granulation of the Eyelids

Is Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment—Scores of Uses for the Great Soothing, Healing Ointment. Most people know Dr. Chase's Ointment best as a cure for eczema and itching piles. Nor is this to be wondered at when you think of the remarkable record made in this class of cures. But there are scores of other uses for this ointment, which are only discovered when it is kept constantly at hand. Mrs. Martin, 13 Carroll street, Toronto, formerly of Bowmanville, Ont., writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years, and found it invaluable in treating skin irritations and all sorts of burns and wounds. In fact, we would not be without it in the house. It is a most excellent treatment for granulated eyelids, from which I suffered without finding anything to help me." Wherever there is itching of the skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can use Dr. Chase's Ointment with full assurance that it will prove entirely satisfactory. Price, 5 cents a box.
