THAT BELONG TO THE GOVERN-MENT?

A Society entitled "Organisation for the Maintenance of Supplies"—the O.M.S. in short—has just been formed. It is intended that in times of a general strike, or any other industrial upheaval, its members should organise the food supplies and other matters vital to the well-being of the community. In spite of its aims, the organisation is not receiving too cordial a welcome, and the Morning Post, which is poles apart in its views from the Daily News, is equally doubtful as to the wisdom of the organisation. It states:—

"We have not a word of criticism to utter against the noblemen and gentlemen who compose the Council of O.M.S., but we are bound to recognise that they collectively lack a little of the authority and the widely representative character which such a Council should possess."

"It may be suggested that a movement so momentous as this, concerning the vital interests of the country, involving such big issues of policy and such possibilities of serious developments, should be based as broadly as possible, and be national in scope and inspiration."

"There are several organisations already in existence which are attempting to do in their own way what O.M.S. aims to achieve, and we cannot but think that the public interest would be better served if the complete co-operation of all these forces were assured by their absorption in a single, comprehensive organisation."

Wholly The Function of Government. "There remains, moreover, a doubt as to whether O.M.S. disclaims, as any such organisation should, that protection of the community which is wholly the function of Government. Big things must be managed in a big way; and, therefore, while we have the utmost goodwill to the aims of O.M.S., and the clearest recognition of its excellent intentions, we must admit a doubt as to whether it is an instrument quite effective for the purpose in hand."

"The simple truth is that the O.M.S. is but the latest manifestation of the fear of Communism. That fear is being played upon a little violently at the present time," asserts the Daily Express. "It is damaging trade and industry. Business men are unwilling to undertake the expansion of their businesses."

"This terror of the Red menace, which is being continually injected into them, is causing their activities to contract. It is depressing the whole country. Communism may, it is true, become a peril. When it offers a serious threat to the institutions of the country we shall be able to deal with it."

"But in the meantime the extremists of the Labour Party are being kept in order by Mr. J. H. Thomas, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and their other recognized leaders. Communism, life Fasgism, is sectional. Both movements are provocative. One breeds the other, and the process will be indefinitely continued at the expense of the country's peace of mind."

The Manchester Guardian is equally critical. It states:—

Necessary To Keep Free From Any Partisan Tinge. "The projected 'Organisation for Maintaining Supplies, as it is euphemistically called, is intended to enlist some sort of army of persons, pledged, 'when emergency arises, to act under the direction of the O.M.S. in maintaining and protecting Public Services, and, if required, to enrol myself as a Special Constable."

"Now, to assist in maintaining and protecting vital public services is certainly a virtuous action, and to become a special constable, when need arises, is another. So is it a virtuous action to save imperilled women and children. But the Jameson Raid did not become a virtuous action when its ingenious contrivers described its motive as a desire to save women and children."

"And when a private committee, of a distinctly party colour, propose to thrust themselves into the place of the national Government and to give a partisan tinge beforehand to possible official acts which it is absolutely necessary to keep free from any tinge of the kind, they must expect their offer to be received with some caution by a public somewhat weary of public professions of virtue."

"This may seem to be a blow aimed at the Labour Movement. If it is meant for that it has been badly misdirected," is the opinion of the Daily Herald. "Should there be need for any efforts of this nature, Trade Unions, and Co-operative Societies are the proper people to see to the feeding of all working members of the community: there will be no place for titled amateurs or naval and military muddlers."

"Will the Prime Minister submit to this insulting intimation that he is unfit for his job? That is for him to decide."

The Observer takes a contrary view. "We are not amongst those who disparage the new society, O.M.S.—the voluntary 'Organisation for the Maintenance of Supplies.'" It states in definite terms. "We should like to see

James Baird LIMITED

It joined—the address is 70, Stephen's House, Westminster, S.W.1—by a single man who came back from the front with any technical knowledge, and by every man and woman who took part during the war in public organisation at home. Transport is the key; the suspension of railway services is the only real danger; the determined registration of all men and women who can handle motor vehicles can save this country with absolute certainty so far as mastering the almost inevitable emergency is concerned. This registration we hope the O.M.S. will pursue and achieve, as the organ of citizen defence.

"This assumes that a Parliamentary Ministry will show the nerve and capacity for government. So far Mr. Baldwin's Cabinet has weakly deceived itself. We do not believe that national safety, confidence, and progress will ever be sufficiently restored until Liberalism at least, and moderate Labour if possible, combine with progressive Unionism to restore majority rule, the full strength of Parliamentary supremacy and its vital expression—the maintenance at all costs of public transport and supply."—Public Opinion.

Mining for Wood

Mining is generally associated with minerals and the getting of these substances out of the earth, but there are some places where mining for timber is an important and lucrative industry.

In a wide swamp near Chicago quantities of white oak logs are being recovered, the remains of a great forest that was submerged seven or eight thousand years ago. Although the outer layers of wood have decayed, some chemical agent in the soil has made the remainder hard and durable and given it a delicate colour, for which it is much prized.

Gold prospectors on the Charlotte Plains in Australia recently discovered in the bed of a river long since dried up a valuable deposit of timber known as the she-oak. Many of the logs unearthed had the appearance of having been cut and trimmed by human agency. This wood is also noted for its toughness, and is employed in the manufacture of ornaments and toilet articles.

In the peat bogs in Ireland deposits of bog-oak are frequently encountered. This substance is just black and occasionally hard, and provides a profitable industry for the inhabitants, who fashion it into ornaments, pipes, crosses, and so on.

Certain New Zealanders obtain a livelihood by digging for kauri-gum, an amber-coloured resinous substance derived from the kauri-pine, and used in the preparation of special varnishes. The fossilized vegetable resin known as amber is also dug out of the earth, and in some parts of Germany and in Jutland there are pits made specially for finding the substance.

In British Columbia there is a peculiar mine from which a kind of soap is obtained. The origin of the substance is a mystery, but it consists of borax and some fatty ingredient blended by Nature into the semblance and consistency of soap.

Alleged Insurance Fraud

LEADS TO MURDER CHARGES.

PIKEVILLE, Ky., Oct. 20.—Mrs. William N. Turner, who is said to have received $25,000 insurance on the "death" of her husband, in the alleged murder and insurance fraud at McCarr, Ky., has been indicted by the Pike County Grand Jury in connection with the case, county officials announced to-day.

A murder warrant has been procured against F. F. Farley, of Miami, Fla., husband of Turner's sister, who is said to have received $60,000 insurance money. Mrs. Farley is already under arrest on a murder indictment.

Whistling Champions

Twelve thousand schoolboys and girls competed in a whistling contest held in Jersey City to find the best sixteen whistlers, from whom the city's most accomplished whistler will be selected.

Not a single girl entrant won a first place. More than 50 per cent. of the 500 girls entered in the contest were disqualified because of giggling. The age limit for the contestants was fifteen years. The entrants ranged from four years up, but the youngest winner was Walter Norton, aged nine. Walter's staying powers seemed inexhaustible.

Italian boys whistled operatic selections; Irish boys jig and reel tunes; there was Spanish music, German music, music of the Scandinavian countries, Russian music, and in the Negro section plantation songs and Southern melodies.

There was no lack of "novelties." Creaking gates, police whistles, factory whistles, railway trains, motor horns, howling dogs, and squeaking pigs were all reproduced.
