JOHN CAMERON, President and
 Man. Dir.
 God's in His heaven, All's right with the world.
 —Browning.
 London, Friday, July 17.

Mr Charles Tupper has decreed that everywhere a war of protests shall be opened on successful Liberal M. P.s. Our friends in constituencies where Conservatives have been elected by corrupt means—and we hear that many such elections took place—will doubtless duly note the threat of the defeated and disgruntled leader and prepare accordingly.

Stuart Livingston, a young Hamilton lawyer, who was made a Q. C. by the late Government for political services, gives this explanation of how the extraordinary list of Queen's counsel came to be formulated: "There has been much complaint for some time past about the large number of lawyers in Canada, whose claims to the title Q. C. were steadily ignored. It even reached the ears of the Queen herself, because she wrote to the Government requesting that more Q. C.s be appointed. In fact, I saw the letter myself, and it was signed 'Victoria Regina.'" Her Majesty is indeed a busy woman if this legal gentleman tells the truth.

The Scottish-American, of New York, very properly reaches the conclusion that "Canada, with her unexcelled banking system, her assured fiscal policy, and her undeveloped natural wealth inferior to that of no other country, ought to be able to find employment for all the capital and manhood that Great Britain can send her."

The death of ex-Gov. Russell of Massachusetts, at a comparatively early age, removes a brilliant Democratic leader, and one of the ablest and best of public men in the United States.
 The neighboring Republic, in the present condition of affairs, can ill afford to lose men of the stamp of William Russell.

The Hamilton Spectator has just completed its jubilee. It was first issued in July, 1846, under the editorial management of the late Mr. Smiley.
 In the course of its career, it has absorbed three other journals, while as many more have been started in the city, run for a time, and then wound up. The Spectator today is one of the best-conducted journals on the continent. Though opposed to the new Government, it makes the announcement that it is about to erect for its own use a fine new printing office, and that at an early day it will desert its rented building. This faith in the new regime is refreshing.
 We believe it will be found to be amply warranted. The jubilee number of the Spectator, sent out on Wednesday, with its illustrations and interesting letter press, and a facsimile of the first issue, will be a welcome souvenir to many former Hamiltonians.

The Toronto Telegram (Conservative) urges its friends in Parliament to select a new leader. It says that so long as Sir Charles Tupper leads it the Conservative Opposition can never be united, and it adds: "To weaken the Opposition is to strengthen the Laurier Government, and to prevent a reunion of the strongest elements in the Conservative party by insisting upon Sir Charles Tupper's leadership, is to weaken the Opposition." This will certainly be held to be treason to the Nova Scotia dictator.
 When the proprietor of the Telegram takes his seat in Parliament, he will doubtless be read out of the party by Sir Charles.

Judging by the snarling which is being indulged in in some quarters, Mayor Little's announcement that the railway connections of London are now all that could be desired, and are fixed beyond dispute for many years to come, is disappointing to a few. It may be that a very small number of people in London so hold, but not the vast majority of the citizens. They are proud of this fair center as a place of residence and livelihood, and are delighted that through its now firmly established railway connections the city has access to all parts of Western Ontario, effective means of reaching every portion of its own country, and ample opportunity to ship to and import from all parts of the world. In face of this most satisfactory condition of affairs, and with a new and progressive Government at the helm of affairs in Ottawa, we are satisfied that London will have its full share of the prosperity and progress that must in the near future come from the development of this great land. Let us all work to secure that end.

The Boston Daily Standard, after a career of less than a year, died in its summer day this week.

Church and State in Elections.
 The archbishops and bishops of Quebec who commanded the people of their faith in that Province to vote for the candidates of Sir Charles Tupper, and who made it a matter of conscience to vote against all candidates who did not favor the Coercion Bill, were in this matter far less liberal than the head of their church. Indeed, it is clear now that a great majority of French-Canadian Roman Catholics knew their rights and privileges as well as, if not better than, the members of the hierarchy themselves, and they have shown an independence which men of loftier professions might do well to emulate. If they have placed the authors of the mandement at defiance, it is doubtless because they regarded that paper as a thing without warrant from the source of all authority in their church, and possibly also they were not without good reason for believing that the mandement was, in fact, only a veil under cover of which the dignitaries of the church in Quebec sought to force the policy of a political party upon the country. The attitude of the Pope upon all such issues has been declared in the recent encyclical letter upon the unity of Christian churches, a summary of which was given to the public a few days ago by Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore. The following extract from the cardinal's abstract is very important, coming as it does so closely upon the events in Quebec:
 "The church is man's guide to whatever pertains to heaven. This is the office appointed to it by God, that it may watch over and may order all that concerns religion, and may, without let or hindrance, exercise, according to its judgment, its charge over Christianity. Wherefore they who pretend that the church has any wish to interfere in civil matters, or to infringe upon the rights of the State, either know it not or wickedly calum-niate it."

This statement of the relations of the Church to the State is not merely a severe condemnation of the mande-ment in Quebec, but is an ample justification of the course of the French-Canadian electors who bade defiance to the mandement, and those who issued it. The Mail and Empire, of Toronto, which published the Cardinal Gibbons abstract, is doing its utmost every day to terrorize Ontario with the idea of French domination; but to those who consider the circumstances fairly, it must be obvious that that journal might take lessons in liberty from the people whose action it commends. If the editor of the Mail and Empire were living in Quebec, would he have voted at the command of the bishops? Apparently he would. But he must see now that the majority of the French-Canadian electors have been justified by the teachings of the Pope.

Under Canvas.
 Notes From the Y. M. C. A. Camp at Port Stanley.

No Lack of Breeze on Fraser Heights—A Menagerie—"Good Digestion Waits on Appetite."

Port Stanley, July 16, 1896.
 The Y. M. C. A. camp of '96 is located at the old spot on Fraser Heights, and comprises four tents—two large and two small. Those who are at present enjoying the privilege of life under canvas are: F. McMartin, C. Fisher, E. Marshall, J. Rumball, M.
 Dale, T. Lind, F. Spry, and A. Fisher.
 The weather so far has not been all that one could desire for camping, yet the life is not without its charms. A few nights ago we had a severe wind storm, and two of our tents had to be taken down. Neighbors had tents blown from over their heads, and few people, even in houses, slept. Neighbors very kindly called to us to forsake our tents and stay with them.
 We heard their not-our consciences were clear.

The boys have started a menagerie, and one innocent little red squirrel is the first specimen. A rabbit was let go on account of youth and crowded quarters.

Fred Lind is cook, and is proving a good "find." One of the boys says things which he cooks always taste like "more." "Is the fish all right, Ernie?" "Bet your life, Skinny." (Caught at the table.)

Dish-washing and bed-making are "sciences" only partly learned, but they are improving under our "matrons'" motherly eye, and mothers may expect much skillful help on their return home.

A taffy pull was presided over by Frank McMartin, and all had a sweet time as a result.

Our "Jack" has built a seat overlooking the lake, for weary people—we are surprised to find so many in the world—but cruelly labeled it "For Gents Only." Evidently he does not desire it to be a lovers' retreat.
 Sports, aquatic and land, will take place on Monday.

A Pioneer Dead.
 The Late Andrew Thomson of York Street.

The Founder of Innerkip Village—Father of the Oatmeal Industry—A Useful Life.

The interment of the late Andrew Thomson, who died Tuesday at his home, 120 York street, took place yesterday afternoon at Woodland Cemetery. Rev. Mr. Macgregor, of Tilson-burg, and Rev. J. H. Clark, city, conducted the funeral services.
 dence at 2:30, a large number of friends, many from a distance, attending. The pall-bearers were:
 Messrs. W. Thomson, Seaforth; W. A.
 Thomson and J. H. Clark, city, conducted the funeral services.
 friends, many from a distance, attending. The pall-bearers were:
 Messrs. W. Thomson, Seaforth; W. A.
 ducted the funeral services.

Mr. Thomson had reached the ripe age of 87, and in his death was severed one of the few remaining links that bind the present generation to the pioneer days of Canada. The aged veteran was born in 1808, at Heaton's Mills, near Kelso, Scotland, and having received his education at the parish school was apprenticed to a millwright business in Kelso. He was married in 1832 to Agnes Vass, who survives him. The aged couple celebrated the 54th anniversary of their wedding day last April, surrounded by their children and grandchildren.
 In 1842 Mr. and Mrs. Thomson decided to seek their fortunes in the new land of Canada, and with their three children, Robert, Walter and Elizabeth, settled in the village of Lambton, on the Humber River. He began his career as a millwright in Canada by building the well-known Howland's mill, and also the Gamble mill. In 1846 he removed to Beachville, which was then a thriving village, and a half fair to become the county town, and during a residence of about twenty years erected most of the important mills in Western Ontario. He had to contend with all the difficulties incident to a pioneer's life. In many cases mills were built where the only means of approach was by a path blazed through the trees, and everything had to be done without the aid of the mechanical appliances of modern times. He always left behind him the record of sound and honest workmanship.

He was the founder of the village of Innerkip, and was also the father of the oatmeal industry of Canada. He built and carried on extensive milling operations in Innerkip for several years, having removed from Beachville in 1864. He died, after having lived five years in Innerkip, to retire, and having sold out his business, removed to Mitchell and from thence to London, where he quietly settled, and during eight years of a busy and energetic life.

Of the mills erected by him in and around London are mentioned J. L.
 Byron mills, the large flour and saw mills of Reynard & Shaw, Hunt's City Mills, Moore's mills, in South London, and many others.

Mr. Thomson leaves behind him a large family, all of whom are occupying prominent positions in their respective neighborhoods. The sons are:
 Robert, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Walter, of Mitchell; Henry, of London; Charles, of Tilsonburg; and David, of Texas.
 The daughters are: Mrs. Saunders, of London; and Agnes, who resides with her mother.

He was a life-long Presbyterian, and was a member of the First Presbyterian Church. He was also a staunch Liberal, and took a deep and intelligent interest in the many stirring political movements that took place during his long life. He was a warm and ardent friend of the late Hon. George Brown, and a reader of the Globe since its inception, and also of the Banner, the predecessor of the Globe.

The passing away of the aged veteran was quiet and peaceful, and he leaves behind him as a heritage to his children and grandchildren the memory of a strong, useful and honored life.
