WALTER HERBERT RELATES HIS STORY REGARDING JOSEPH H. SIFTON'S DEATH

Old Man Was Struck on Head Several Times With Axe blows which Gerald dealt to the old man's head. According to Herbert, at Then Thrown From the Barn.

Ten Times.

WITNESS' EVIDENCE

Herbert Gives Details of the Morning's Events on Day That Gerald's Father Met Death.

Crown Prosecutor Clute, in opening the Sifton case, proceeded to outline to the jury the facts of the case in accordance with the crown's theory of the manner in which Joseph H. Sifton came to his death. He went over the events of the night of June 29, and the the crown. He also referred to Herbert's action in pleading guilty at the fall assizes in 1900. He asked the jury to approach the case with unbiassed minds. He said for his part he would endeavor to act dispassionately and fairly, not striving alone for a conviction of the prisoner, but merely en-deavoring to sift the truth.

THE FIRST WITNESS. The first witness caled was Hubert C. McBride, who identified a number of plans and photographs produced as representing the house, barn and various other portions of Joseph Sifton's farm and the surrounding country. Mr. McBride said he had first visited the Sifton property on July 30, 1900, one month after the alleged murder. He found that three boards had been knocked from the upper part of the ton murder trial opened sharp on time

After a long deliberation and further argument, Judge Britton said that in deference to the statements of Mr. Clute, he considered that it was expedient to issue an order that the jury view the scene. The party will go in charge of two constables and Col. Macbeth, the clerk of the court. Mr.J.M.McEvoy, on behalf of the defense, and Mr. J. B. McKillop, on behalf of the crown, will also accompany the party, and any points to which they wish to call the attention of the jury will be communicated by them to the clerk, and he will in turn communicate them to the

Mr. Johnston said he must ask that events of the night of June 29, and the morning and afternoon of June 30, as set forth by the various witnesses for climbing all over the barn. Judge Britton, in dismissing the jury for the evening, said that in the trial of such a case as the one in hand, those connected with it must suffer a certain amount of inconvenience, and the members of the jury, most of all. and have their meals brought in to them. He asked them not to discuss the case or form any premature judgments about it. He set the hour of 8 a.m. for them to visit the Sifton farm and directed them to try no experiments while there. They were there to observe, not to experiment.

Judge Britton announced that he would sit each day from 9:30 a.m. till 6:30 p.m., half an hour longer than the assize judges generally sit. One hour will be allowed for luncheon. Court adjourned shortly after 5 p.m., to be resumed at 11 a.m. Tuesday. The second day's session of the Sif-least ten blows were given to Joseph Sifton, one by Herbert himself and the rest by Gerald.

Herbert's opening statement that he had worked at Gerald Sifton's house since Dec. 9, 1899. He knew Gerald's father Joseph, who "kept bach" at the place "where the deed was done." Those residing at Gerald's were Gerald, Mary Macfarlane, ious objection to the granting of the application, as he believed it would witness. The night before Jos. Sifton's death witness was working in the cellar at Gerald's. Gerald told him that he (Gerald) was going away, and that "his missus" would help witness with the buttermaking. Witness was awakened next morning by Gerald at 5:30 or 6. While witness was milking the cows Gerald came to him and asked him to go down to Joseph Sifton's house. Gerald said he had to fix the hayfork, and that after it was fixed he meant to do away with his father by knocking him out of the end of the barn. Gerald offered Herbert $1,000 to come along to be a "witness" for him, in case anything should occur to make people suspicious about the job. Herbert was to do as he was Witness said he would go with Gerald and help put up the hayfork track.

He was not to have anything to do with putting Joseph Sifton out of the way. Gerald was to do it all. After breakfast witness and Gerald left the latter's house in a cart. As they drove away Mrs. Gerald came the members of the jury, most of all. and stopped them, and asked Gerald They would sleep in the court house, what time he would be home for dinner. He said at 12 o'clock.

She turned away, then came back half crying and asked if there was any fear of "anyone catching on" or of anything happening. Gerald leaned from the cart and spoke to her, but witness could not hear what he said. This statement of Herbert's is entirely new, he having mentioned nothing of it at the last trial.

Leaving Gerald's, the two drove to

He threw the axe on the floor, and took a bag they had brought in the cart, Gerald saying he would do all the job and containing wrenches and hammers. Gerald then said, "The old man the cart, or about Gerald saying in the cart, or about Gerald saying in away to marry Mary McFarlane. The job has to be done up quick, as they have got on to it. Someone has told them." Gerald then took a large blacksmith hammer from the bag and went up to knock off boards from the end of the barn. Gerald told witness if Joseph Sifton came up to hit him on the head with the axe.

"I STRUCK HIM." "When his father came up, I struck him; then I caught hold of him and pulled him up. Gerald came over and struck him again, struck him three or four blows on the top of the head. His father's legs seemed to cave in and he fell through the hole. His legs went through the rungs of the ladder and he hung there. Gerald told me to get down and shove him up. I did so, and Gerald pulled him out of the hole, and hit him two or three more blows. "Then we picked him up and carried him to the second bent of the mow, and threw him down on his back. I went back and got his hat and the axe I came back and threw down the axe, and Gerald picked it up and hit him again a couple of times.

"Gerald then wiped the axe off with a bunch of hay, and threw the hay in the north end of the barn. Then Gerald took the axe again and hit him a few more times. Then Gerald caught hold of his shoulders and I took his feet and we carried him over and threw him out the end of the barn When he went out he did not strike on his head, but on his shoulder. Gerald did not like the way he was lying and he told me to straighten his feet to the south, and to get bricks and stones and put them under his head. There was no blood on the bricks and Gerald told me to put some on. Gerald was at the lower hole in the barn when he told me. Gerald threw the axe out of the hole and told me to hurry up and fix it, and then to hurry

"When I came in there was a plot of blood on the hay on the floor. Gerald picked the hay up and threw it all over the heap of hay at the north side of the barn. Then he looked out and said 'Hurry up and get out, Mary is coming.'

Witness advised Gerald to go and tell Mary what had happened. Gerald went to get the harness on the horse and directed witness to go and tell Mary that the old man had fallen out of the barn, and was nearly killed. Witness did as directed and met Mary at 11 o'clock, a noticeable proportion of near the barnyard gate. Mr. Clute asked permission of the judge to ask witness what statement he made to Mary. The judge allowed the question to be asked. "I told her the governor had fallen out of the end of the barn and was nearly killed," was Herbert's answer. Mr. Johnston objected to a question, as to Mary's reply, and the bench upheld the objection.

Witness said he went back to the barn and helped Gerald hitch the horse, then he opened the gate Gerald to drive out. Gerald told witness to go across and tell Job Sinker what had happened. Witness did so, and as he and Sinker came back to the house Alonzo Decker, came along. They went in and carried Joseph Sifton to the house. Mr. Clute then asked witness several questions as to the events immediately preceding the attack in the barn. Witness said that when Joseph Sifton came out to the barn he wore a black suit and hat.

This ended Mr. Clute's examination of Herbert, which had lasted only about three-quarters of an hour.

HERBERT CROSS-EXAMINED

Mr. Johnston took the witness in hand and in the course of his crossexamination managed to show many small but important discrepencies between Herbert's evidence of a year ago and that now offered. In answer to Mr. Johnston's question the witness said that he had had no word with Gerald Sifton as to the doing away with his father before the morning of June 30, and then it was all arranged in a few minutes' conversation.

Witness said that at Gerald's bidding he went up and knocked off two or three more boards from the end fo the barn. This made five or six knocked off.

told him to hit the old man. He had now changed the statement and said that Gerald dropped the axe on the floor and he picked it up.

Another discrepancy was found in witness' statement that after carrying the old man part way across the barn he went back and got the axe and the old man's hat. Last year he said that while he went down through the trap door for the hat, Gerald came over and got the axe. Witness said that Joseph Sifton might have got up through the barn door. Witness said the doors were shut. Mr. Johnston read his previous statement that he looked through the partly opened south door and saw the old man man coming.
