Dowrles Needed. If the money spent on expensive schools for boys and girls were to be put by as for the girls, and if the boys were taught practical farming and then married to the girls and sent out to Canadian farms with modern capital, there would no longer be the sight of young men hanging about for odd jobs, with all the professions crowded, and so many militant Suffragists making Britain the laughing stock of the world. The Suffragist worry was the price which had to be paid for spending so much money on extravagant and painful education for boys, while the girls had no dowries provided for them.

The speaker expressed great hopefulness with regard to the future of irri-gated Canada, though he thought the people there, like true sons of a shopkeeping nation, rather over-advertised their attractions. Napoleon had saved Great Britain from that spirit a hun-dred years ago, and he thanked God that the German navy was rising into power, and that, when really formidable, it would wean Canada, as well as the people of Britain, from that harlot spirit in commerce against which Isalah pronounced his bitterest woe, and which was capable, above all else, of making the nation lose that title of respect which a proud man never pays but to the proud

It is known that the Emperor's main object in attending the man-oeuvres was to convince himself of the ability of the Swiss army to make the case of war, and his remark is interpreted to mean that by the Swiss army forming a screen to prevent the French from invading Germany through Switzerland, the Germans could release six army corps in South in Alsace-Lor-Germany for service

The Emperor, in conversation, constantly insisted upon the necessity of understandings as the best means of dissipating suspicion, and declared his personal desire to maintain peace. On one occasion, in emphasizing this in conversation with President Ferrer the Emperor intimated to the president that he acquired much of his in-
