

Publishers' Announcement.

We believe our readers will take great interest in the opening chapter in this number of Alan S. Cole's article describing the old embroideries in the famous South Kensington Museum of London. We also are pleased to present new patterns for the various laces used in costume, together with complete instructions how to make them. As this is a lace season, we predict these designs will be much in demand.

The October 1900 issue will be a notable one. It will contain an unusually attractive assortment of new embroidery designs, and special attention will be given to suitable novelties for Christmas gifts. No needleworker can afford to miss this number.

Subscribers who call the attention of their friends to CORTICELLI HOME NEEDLEWORK will do us a great favor. The low subscription price of 35 cents per year places it within the reach of all. A complete set of back numbers from January 1899 will be found almost indispensable to any woman, and the Library Edition Volume I, combining the first four numbers published, which makes a gift book that will always be appreciated. Foreign subscriptions, two shillings per year; single copies, seven pence.
